SHOOTS WOMAN AND DIES

PEARY IS NEVER TO GO AGAIN

SYDNEY, N. S., Sept. 22.—Commander Robert E. Peary, with his wife and children, left here at 7:05 o'clock to-day over the Intercolonial Railroad for Portland, Me. He will go from there to his Summer home at Eagle Island, where he will rest and prepare his report of his dash to the Pole and the data by which he hopes to disprove that Dr. Cook beat him there.

Because of the early hour there were but few people at the train when the explorer left and there was no demonstration.

The Roosevelt left early to-day for the International pier to take on 300 tons of coal preparatory to starting at 5 o'clock to-night for New York. All of the Peary contingent will go on the famous Arctic ship with the exception of Commander Peary. Matt Henson finds himself a great hero and has received more telegrams than any other member of the party, with the exception of Peary himself.

Party Starts Early.

The Peary party was up at 5 o'clock and everybody was eager to help the Commander off. Captain Bartlett assisted Peary, while George Borup assisted Mrs. Peary on the train with her belongings.

Thieves got away with many of the belongings of the Roosevelt last night. Pritchard lost many of his effects. McMillan said to-day:

"I heard the thieves about 11 o'clock last night. I heard some one say: 'Well, I got a fur coat and a pair of gloves.'"

Members of the crew got after the thieves in a rowboat, but were unable to catch them.

It was the desire of Commander Peary, expressed before leaving, that the Roosevelt get under way at once in order to get to New York in time for the participation in the Hudson-Fulton celebration.

The police and detectives worked all night attempting to locate and restore the valuable data taken from the Roosevelt by "souvenir hunters." Professor Donald McMillan lost the entire fruits of all his Arctic labors and was disconsolate with grief. All his notes, observations, his diary and camera, together with a large collection of photographs vanished and while the Roosevelt was overrun with sightseers.

Peary Promises Hot Statement.

Commander Peary expects to arrive home at Eagle Island on Friday evening. He will deny himself to the public and decline all invitations to public functions until after he has compiled his report.

"What I have to say," said Commander Peary with a snap of his jaws, will not be delayed. You may rest assured on that. But at this time I cannot tell you to the day when I shall be prepared to speak. Acting on the advice of Secretary Bridgeman of the Peary Arctic Club and General Hubbard, I prefer not to accept any invitations for public receptions, or anything until the present controversy is settled by competent authorities.

"I wish, however, to thank all my friends for their kind wishes and invitations. I do not know when I shall go to New York. I intend to have my report to the Peary Arctic Club and shall go to work on it, with my sleeves rolled up, at once after reaching home."

Peary intimated that he would remain at Eagle Island for several weeks, and until after he had submitted all his facts in contradiction of Dr. Cook's story.

Thanks Sympathetic People.

Before leaving Sydney, Commander Peary discussed his discovery along many lines which have thus far been overlooked.

"What impresses you most in the whole achievement?" the explorer was asked.

"The generous appreciation of my country," he answered. "It has been a constant stimulus during the long struggle, and is the most satisfying and gratifying reward, now it is all over.

"In some way beyond my control the proposition to go north year by year and to change from a narrow personal ambition to one of national importance, as you tell me, my friends in New York believe it to be, that has served as national disgrace, my pleasure is intensified. Will the American people, I wonder, let everybody in my name for all the kind words said and published?

But how about the Pole and your sensations?

Language can give no adequate idea either of the physical fact or of my mental attitude on the experiences. I had nothing to go by in respect to either, and, as I said, some satisfaction that my previous notions were confirmed. I cannot say that I found pretty much what I expected and felt pretty much as I expected, I should not be far out of the way. Besides, we were too busy and duty too imperative to allow much time for sensations. It was of course great satisfaction to know that the correctness of my route and my methods have been demonstrated and that there is at least and at last an American route to the Pole."

"As to the journey itself, was it more or less difficult and its dangers greater or less than those before?"

"Decidedly less than 1906 and proving again that had it not been for the week's

BECAUSE SHE DIDN'T ELOPE

His Love for Married Woman Spurned, Harry Hill of New York Figures in Double Tragedy at South Framingham. Woman Is Dying in Hospital.

SOUTH FRAMINGHAM, Sept. 22.—Because she refused to elope with him, Harry E. Hill of New York, to-day shot Mrs. Josephine Geertz, a fruit dealer in this city, causing injuries that it is thought will prove fatal. Then he killed himself.

The injured woman is about thirty years of age and very attractive. She lived with her husband, Otto, at No. 4 Eames street. He is employed as a towerman by the New York Central Railroad at Riverside. He was absent from home when the tragedy took place at 7:25 a. m. to-day.

Hill was about thirty-five years of age and of fine physique. He was well dressed, and in a suit case which he brought with him when he came here several days ago he had other clothing. He stopped with the Geertz family, who have kept some lodgers. Arthur Dubbin, another lodger, who was in another room of the apartment when the shooting took place, said:

"I overheard Hill trying to persuade the woman to elope with him. She said she would not. He asked her time and again to go away with him and she persistently declared she would not. She asked him to go away and not try to have her do such a thing. Then came the shots."

Dubbin ran downstairs and telephoned for the police. Patrolman Taylor reached the house first. The Geertz family live on the second floor of the building. Taylor ran up the stairway and at the top found Mrs. Geertz moaning.

"Are you hurt?" asked the policeman.

"Yes, I have been shot," she replied faintly.

"Who shot you?"

Accused by Woman.

"Harry Hill"

"Where is he?"

"I don't know—some place about the house, I suppose."

The policeman found Hill on the floor of the kitchen near the stove. He clutched a revolver in his right hand. An ambulance was called and Mrs. Geertz was hurried to the Framingham Hospital. It was found that she had been shot in three places.

One of the bullets had passed entirely through her body just below the heart. Another had passed through one ear and grazed the head. The end of one of the fingers of her right hand was shot off. It is believed that this was done while the woman was trying to snatch the weapon from the hand of her assailant.

The doctors declared that the woman

"Blame All Mine," Suicide Says in Note to Mother

In a letter which Hill left addressed to his mother, which has been forwarded to her at Biade, Del., by Chief of Police Sullivan, he wrote:

Dear Mother—No matter what happens I am to blame. I am to blame for it all. Nobody else. Fondest love. Your son, HARRY.

300 DIE IN TIDAL STORM

NEW ORLEANS, Sept. 22.—Details of the terrible havoc wrought by the hurricane which swept the gulf states were brought here to-day by refugees who arrived with the next news from the devastated zone and declared that 300 persons had lost their lives in one portion of Louisiana struck by the storm.

Half clothed, famished and panic-stricken by the horrible scenes which they passed through, men, women and children straggled into the city to-day in a continuous procession, each group vieing with the other in the terrifying descriptions of the damage to life and property.

These miserable, half-starved people declared that a great tidal wave had swept the coast from Grand Island westward to Vermillion Parish, washing away entire villages and drowning at least 300 persons.

At Houma and other towns on the edge of the ravaged districts the refugees flocked to safety. The tidal wave, born before a hurricane of wind, swept up out of the gulf, while the storm raged at its height, catching the people unawares and drowning them like rats.

Relief Parties Sent.

The refugees declared that in some of the villages in the path of the wave dead bodies lie cluttering the streets mingled with debris of fallen houses. Many other dead bodies were washed out into the gulf, carried away by the receding wave.

The defenceless people of the coast suffered worst. In the interior great damage and loss of life followed the gale, but along the gulf edge the tide combined with the storm-wind to bring death and destruction.

It is believed that the worst damage was done bordering the shores of Terre-Bonn Parish.

The refugees who reached here managed to make their way through the ravaged districts only after the most severe hardships. At times they were compelled to wade through swollen streams, over treacherous quicksands and through dangerous swamp lands. They had no food, and the continued sight of demolished homes and mangled bodies tended to increase their fears.

Many of them begged piteously that help be sent to find relatives and friends who were unable to escape from the devastated sections. Relief expeditions were sent both from here and Houma to give succor to the injured and others who were unable to escape.

Starvation Faces Many.

The people who arrived here say that starvation faces those who remained behind. They are exposed to cold winds and deluges of rain.

A relief party started out to find the bodies of the dead who are known to have perished with M. J. Smith of Newberry, Ala. This party was on a fishing excursion at the mouth of Bayou Terre-Bonne. The ravaged district was populated by 3,000 people. Rading estimates upon the stories told by the refugees here the property loss will go beyond $10,000,000.

The tidal wave came at the height of the storm. At the time the aristocratic Summer colonies on the Louisiana and Mississippi gulf coast were filled and also the wealthy tourists from the North, West and South were living there, maintaining private launches for trips among the picturesque islands. The refugees declare that many of these pleasure seekers must have been killed because the camps were demolished. Cottages were blown before the wind to be picked up by the waves and torn asunder.

AMERICAN LEAGUE GROUNDS, Washington, Sept. 22.—Jennings and his men consider the defeat of the Athletics a life saver, and they believe the half a game they gained on the Mackmen will help a whole lot in winning the pennant for them.

With Johnson out of the way, they counted on taking every remaining game from the Senators, but they realized that they had their work cut out for them in New York and Boston.

Donovan, Mullin and Killian warmed up against Groome and Oberlin for the third game of the series.

SHIBE PARK, Philadelphia, Sept. 22.—The Athletics appeared somewhat dazed when they came on the field this afternoon. Their defeat by the Browns was something they couldn't understand. It would have been a fine game to win so they would have gained half a game on the Tigers, but as it turned out the Tigers gained half a game on the Mackmen.

It was cloudy and warm when play began and the crowd was not as big as usual. The chances are that Mack will put up Morgan again this year, but will depend on Plank, Bender and Krause, with Bygert and Coombs to fall back on in case of necessity.

HUNTINGTON AVENUE GROUNDS, Sept. 22.—Both league pennants are at least interesting and the promise of fun on Manager to send Mitchell, one of his records with a great minor league record, on the box against the Red Sox pleased the fans who hoped the Cleveland manager would not change his mind at the last minute.

The visitors' lineup contained several changes, who will be thoroughly tried out in the next two weeks. The Cleveland club is passing through the whirlwind end the Red Sox encountered two seasons ago. The club must build up with first contenders, as the Browns, the Senators, the White Sox and several other teams must do in order to be in the running the coming season.

WRANGLE ON JURYMEN FOR STEEL CASES

After an all morning wrangle between the twenty-eight lawyers for the defence and District Attorney Hill, the former faced the alternative of recalling at least four of the challenges which they made against members of the jury which is to try the thirty-three defendants in the steel cases, or else dismiss the present incomplete jury and summon a new venire, resulting in the postponement of the trial for at least a week.

The situation arose when it was discovered that not one of the nine men seated in the jury box was a member of the original venire. The original fifty were exhausted yesterday and the deputy sheriffs drafted thirty-two more from the streets.

Immediately following the opening of court to-day, District Attorney Hill moved that the jury be dismissed and a new venire summoned.

The motion was opposed by Attorney Charles E. Choate, Jr. The attorneys for both sides then went into a conference which lasted until noontime.

"The defence is prepared to waive two of its challenges and also to waive the point of law that seven of the jurymen must be of the original venire," said Mr. Choate on the court finally.

District Attorney Hill declared his intention of having the jury which would be selected watched by police inspectors, as had been his custom in all cases which were the outgrowth of the Finance Commission's investigations.

District Attorney Hill announced that of the nine men at present in the jury box he was satisfied with all but one. That one he would challenge. If the defence was willing to waive enough of its challenges so that the trial might go on he would be satisfied.

Four persons were hurt and twenty or more are suffering from shock as the result of a wreck on the New Haven road at South Braintree at 9:06 a. m. today. A Boston-bound local passenger train ran into a freight on a siding, and one of the passenger coaches left the rails and was hurled on its side. The injured are:

The local train was made up in South Braintree and left for Boston at 9:02, starting the crash. Two hundred yards from the station, near the Wilkins Street bridge, there is a siding on which stood a freight train.

Some of the rear wheels of the passenger cars caught in the switch and tripped over on the moving freight train, which struck the last passenger coach full on the side, capsizing it. The rest of the cars were derailed and two of them left the track.

The injured people were carried to the home of Thomas Killion and Dr. Henry Beering sent for. He dressed the wounds and sent the people home. The rest of the passengers were brought to Boston on the next train.

SHOT MARRIED WOMAN BECAUSE SHE WOULDN'T RUN AWAY WITH HIM

could not live. She was conscious part of the time. She spoke to the doctors about the shooting.

"I refuse to get now to run off with him. I am the only woman. "I would not do it. Then he shot me."

Husband Breaks Down.

The woman did not know that Hill had killed himself. Otto Goetz reached home shortly after the shooting. He is employed at night. He went to the hospital and was allowed to see his wife. She pleaded bitterly.

Medical Examiner L. M. Palmer took charge of Hill's body. He had shot himself three times—once in the head and twice in the breast. There was no doubt that as intended to make a sure job of putting himself out of existence. He carefully dyed fair tall and had jet black hair.

In Hill's pocket was found a letter addressed to his mother at Blade, Del.

Hill wrote another letter to the chief of police of this city. In that letter he asked the police to collect insurance on his life for $250 in the John Hancock Life Insurance Company.

Premeditated the Deed.

Both of the letters were written last night, so that it is clear that Hill premeditated the deed. He and Otto walked the streets in close talk with him, the police believe, and it is thought that he threat ened his life if he refused.

The news of the tragedy caused great excitement in the city. Some were found fault with because of the cattle show. Hundreds of them joined citizens in the crowd that gathered in the street in front of the house where the shooting took place.

It is believed that Hill knew the district family before they came here and that he had followed the woman to make a final desperate effort to induce her to return to her former relations. Otto Goetz is the only child of his mother, and Mrs. Goetz had tried to discourage his calling again.

CLOTHES ARE NEW CLEW IN STONE CASE

SAVE, Sept. 22.—In the discovery of a suit of clothing that appears to have blood stains upon it, and which they believe to belong to Raymond Ploaffe, the officers who are at work on the mysterious murder of Dr. Henry N. Stone believe they have found the most important evidence yet to sustain their contention that Ploaffe committed the deed with the assistance of George Lapointe.

The officers will be able to present evidence at the inquest at Clinton on Friday that will cause the court to hold the two prisoners for the action of the grand jury, said to-day Sheriff Fillebrown to-day. "We have some evidence which has not been disclosed yet and which I am not at liberty to talk about, but before long we will be able to clear up the mystery."

The clothing found is of khaki and is believed that Ploaffe wore that kind of a suit on Monday evening of last week when he planned to drive Dr. Stone from the home of Mrs. Clara Stone Davis to the train.

An examination of spots on the clothing is being made to ascertain whether they are human blood.

The finding of the suit of clothing, together with having found a buggy with near the scene of the crime, the officers regard as almost conclusive circumstantial evidence that Ploaffe knows more about the murder than he has admitted. The theory of the officers is that Ploaffe shot the while from the buggy at the time Dr. Stone was shot and that he was doing the work after the man on his back. Again, says the while and tossed it into the bushes, where it was later found.

CARVER SUES BOSTON CURB FOR $25,000

An amendment for $25,000 was placed upon the accounts of the Boston Curb by change to-day in a suit by Alex S. Carver. Service on July 12 has, he was prevented from doing business on the floor. He says he was not told why and given no hearing. He became a member, he states, by paying $500 for his seat. He and Dodge sold out their partnership, claim their business has been ruined and, lastly, he says, the action of the Curb Exchange committee has constituted the governing committee has constituted a conspiracy to injure him. Damages were sought since the action of which he complains and that he has never been suspended.

Cannot Understand Action.

"I do not understand how members of said Mr. Carver to-day. "I have not been informed a formal notice of charges against me. I was in no way responsible for that affair. Since it happened I have severed partnership with him. I have since I became a member of the Curb Exchange lived up to every one of its regulations."

Mr. Carver is known as an active and unchallenged member. The charges against him declined to offer any reason for its action. I have had no hearing, so far as I am aware, and my business has been damaged to an incalculable extent.

"This action is even more unjust in regard to the effect upon Mr. Dodge, my former partner, who never had any connection with my former partner. His business has been damaged, too. I have always had the very highest opinions to obtain a hearing from the board.

Gets No Explanation.

Mr. Gutierrez, Samuel Carver of No. 42 Fremont street, and ex-Mayor Charles H. Bartlett of Medford.

Alexis, counsel for the cars and Mc Alberts stated that he had not been consulted about the matter. The cause of action served to-day will obtain a hearing for me, which is what I am after. I wish to secure it in a square deal, and my case in all will be the best one so to the brokers who have had similar troubles. I will not refrain from this curb committee, and who have been treated unfairly.

"The curb committee is only responsible for the last year, and is elected from the membership of the curb. It seems to me hardly to be expected that in a year's change that they have entire exceeded their authority or committed any act of injustice and I for one do not intend to submit to such an unwarranted assumption without cause."

The governing board of the Boston Curb Exchange consists of Frederick P. Bryant, chairman; John A. Boyle, Jr., vice-president; Charles F. Austin, Norman B. Griffith and John W. O'Meehy.

Russia May Free Tolstoi's Servant.

ST. PETERSBURG.—An official blunder in the arrest of M. Gusef, the secretary of Count Tolstoi, who was deported to Siberia for promulgating views distasteful to the Russian government, may lead to the freeing of the author's faithful servant. M. Gusef's "crime" consisted in nothing more than trying to better the condition of the peasantry and gain for them partial release from servitude. Count Tolstoi was deeply affected when he said farewell to his secretary. The aged author embraced M. Gusef, weeping bitterly. The police would allow neither to speak to the other at parting. "I did not weep from sorrow," said Count Tolstoi afterwards, "but from emotion, knowing my friend was leading a spiritual life and was sustained by more than human strength."

Real Baseball Game in Berlin.

BERLIN.—Baseball supremacy has been established so far as the question as to which is the better team is concerned, and the American Women's Club stepped to the front undisputed as the result of the game played on Saturday in the old Bowdoin Gardens. The Colony beat the Medicos by a score of seven innings—after a struggle which was never free from doubt and error. The "Does," manly in defeat, shook hands with their conquerors at the end of the game, when the troubles of Dr. Law, who was umpiring, were over. U. S. Ambassador Hill started the game.

Joseph Chamberlain Better.

LIVERPOOL.—Joseph Chamberlain, the noted statesman of Joseph Chamberlain, who has left for Boston after her visit to Highbury, says that Mr. Chamberlain is greatly improved in health since, though he is physically weak, which has been understood for a long time, he is mentally quite strong, added Mrs. Endicott, taking an intense interest in political matters, and he follows the longest controversy every day very keenly and the progress for the measure for tariff reform gives him great pleasure.

Duel in a Drawing Room.

HAVANA.—A sharply fought duel took place yesterday between General Loynas del Castillo and Wilfredo Fernandez, editor of El Commercio. They fought with sabres in the drawing room of a house situated in the suburbs of Almendares. Both combatants were because of the cattle show. Hundreds of them joined citizens in the crowd that gathered in the street in front of the house where the shooting took place.

It is believed that Hill knew the district family before they came here and that he had followed the woman to make a final desperate effort to induce her to return to her former relations. Otto Goetz is the only child of his mother, and Mrs. Goetz had tried to discourage his calling again.

Extend Strikers' Rent time.

STOCKHOLM.—The landlords of Stockholm are discussing a proposal to give the needy strikers among their tenants an extension of time for the payment of their quarterly rent, due October 1. The bakers have referred their dispute to arbitration and have returned to work. A bomb was exploded under a street car last night, but no serious harm was done.

FRANCES STERBA, MISSING FOR FOUR DAYS FROM HOME

WIDE SEARCH FOR STRANGELY MISSING GIRL

The police are searching for pretty twenty-year-old Miss Frances Sterba, who, last Sunday afternoon, disappeared mysteriously from the home of her sister, Mrs. Catherine Burke, No. 7 Champney street, South Boston.

Mrs. Burke and her maid made inquiries among her sister's friends, but none of them had seen her since she left home. Then Mrs. Burke appealed to the Boston police and they have sent out the alarm all over this and many other New England cities.

Search is now being made in the western part of this State, where it is known Miss Sterba had friends. It is thought that she may be staying with some of them, but, so far, the quest has been futile.

Miss Sterba has many friends in South Boston. She has been employed at Miller's restaurant, Dorchester and Silver streets, and is highly thought of by her employer, who is helping Mrs. Burke hunt for the missing girl.

CASH IN DEAD LETTER OFFICE AIDS OLD MAN

John Johnston, an aged Southampton living at No. 282 Summer street, East Boston, will probably receive $146, which had been sent to him one dollar at a time but which he never received. It is said the letters went to the Dead Letter office in Washington.

Up to two years ago Johnston was employed as a silk hat maker by Charles Orr of No. 4 Summer street. Since he has been unable to work he has been cared for by the Sons' Charitable Society. He was given $1 a month. Anonymous letters containing dollar bills were sent him before he left Orr's employ. When he left the letters continued. Mr. Orr would not find Johnston's address and all the letters were not marked with a return address they were all sent to the Dead Letter Office.

Finally the postoffice inspectors found Johnston. They also found that the letters containing the dollar bills were all mailed from Station A, Cambridge. The postoffice inspectors took a photograph of Johnston to Cambridge and he identified the man as being his former employe.

Mr. Johnston says that he had no idea who is sending him the money. He wonders that years ago he made a loan a silk hat on credit and never was paid for it. He thinks that it is just possible that this strange individual is paying for that hat and paying for it yet. If he is it's the most exotic silk hat on record.

Ferber's biplane, which was the same one he had used at Rheims, was sailing gracefully above when it suddenly turned somersault and crashed to the earth. Ferber was crushed under the motor. The captain's fame as an aviator had been gained under the name of De Rue, which he had adopted as a pseudonym when he first took up aviation.

$500,000 HEIR HIDING, SAYS 'LOST BROTHER'

Lawyers for Daniel B. Russell, the man from the West who is fighting for half of the large estate left by Daniel Russell of Melrose, to-day declared at the resumption of the trial of the will contest in the Probate Court at East Cambridge that William Russell, the son who has inherited the entire fortune, is hiding from the court. He is fighting the claims of Daniel, who, he claims, is not his long missing brother.

Russell has forty-five witnesses who will identify him. By the terms of the will, the estate of $500,000 was to go to William Russell of Melrose, his son, but should his missing son, Daniel Blake Russell ever appear, William must give half of the fortune to him. This William Russell refuses to do, claiming that the contestant is an impostor. Among the witnesses Daniel Russell will put on the stand is Mrs Melrose sweetheart of boyhood days who will identify him as the man who went West years ago.

Mrs. Sarah E. Almy, housekeeper, and James Curtis, gardener for William Russell, to-day took the stand and swore that they do not know the present whereabouts of their employer. They swear that they have not seen him since Wednesday, a few days before the trial commenced. If William Russell is found he will be put on the stand and confronted by Daniel Blake Russell and asked to swear that he is or is not his brother.

After the employes of William Russell had testified to-day Judge Lawton said to Lawyer Nelson L. Sheldon, attorney for Daniel:

"You mean to show that William Russell, the defendant in this action, is evading the authority of this court?"

"That is what we intend to show," said Mr. Russell's lawyer.

Deputy Sheriff Eastman testified that he tried to serve a summons on William Russell, but had failed.

Robert M. Twist, one of the chief witnesses for Robert Russell, testified that after Russell ran away from Malden years ago he met him in Boston, and the two of them worked their way as tramps to North Dakota.

Twist stuck to his story of his wanderings with Russell. His testimony is the connecting link in Russell's story.

POLICEMAN SHOT FROM AN AMBUSH

CHICAGO, Sept. 22.—Policeman James Carey was severely wounded to-day when an attempt was made to murder him, supposedly by a man whom he shot and arrested some time ago. The would-be assassin opened fire from a dark alley. One bullet broke his right leg.

'PARSON' DOWNS AND GIRL BRIDE WHO IS SUING HIM FOR DIVORCE

Rev. William Wolf Downs, better known as "Parson" Downs, the former famous spiritual leader of the old Bowdoin Square Tabernacle, has been served with papers for a divorce by his young wife, who although cruel and abusive, treasures.

Their marriage, in Medford in February, 1907, attracted much attention as the bride, then Miss Sophronia Gertrude Shatton, was only twenty-four and the "Parson" fifty-nine years old. It was the pastor's second marriage, his first wife having died, leaving nine children, most of whom were older than their stepmother. The "Parson" twenty-five years ago received much notoriety through the Talbot divorce case, in which he played a part.

Mr. and Mrs. Downs have not lived together since New Year's, when they broke up their pretty home at No. 98 Main street, Medford, the "Parson" going to live with his daughter, Mrs. Harold M. Allen, at No. 11 Liberty avenue, Medford, while his young wife went to live with her father in a little village in New Hampshire.

The now shattered romance of the parson, began in a restaurant on North Market street, where Miss Stratton and her sister were employed as waitresses. Rev. Mr. Downs and his son were daily patrons and always seated themselves at the young lady's table.

A friendship sprang up between them and after a short courtship they were married February 17, 1907, in Medford, and the match seemed to be an ideal one in spite of the difference in their ages.

When seen at his home to-day Rev. Mr. Downs, who is now a real estate agent, said: "Mrs. Downs has filed papers for divorce. They were served on me one month ago. They allege cruel and abusive treatment. My wife and I have not lived together since New Year's Day. Enos.

Denies Cruelty Charge.

"I have never been cruel or abusive to her in my life.

"When the papers were served on me I at first thought I would make no fight if I should do so, however, as I feel that it would be silent is to give the public the idea I am guilty, which is not so. I shall contest the suit vigorously.

"We have been through one great legal battle to clear my name and spent a fortune doing it.

"My one reason in fighting at that time is the same as in this case and that is 'No man should leave for his children as a heritage a name that is not clean.' I have lived the best I know how and am sure that I will be vindicated fully in this matter."

Church Society Split.

Back in the early eighties Mr. Downs, then a young man in his thirties, came to Boston to assume the pastorate of the Bowdoin Square Baptist Church, a church which at that time held a commanding position in the religious life of the city.

A large part of his parish duties consisted in calling at the homes of his parishioners, and in one instance it is rumored that his calls became of such a frequency as to cause a disagreement between Mrs. Downs and a certain lady, resulting in quarrel and strife which later broke the society into the division in which the pastor figured.

When the grandson took charge of the business he developed the printing press from the Hoe cylinder of 1846 patient to the present double-sextuple and the double-octuple presses and the color press. Another dispatch received this afternoon from the centre says the most severe felt since last December, when Messina and Reggio were wiped out. MANY ASK FOR RECOUNTS OF PRIMARY VOTE

Boston's primary election aroused little interest among either Republicans or Democrats except in a few Representative and Senatorial districts and a half-dozen ward where contests for ward control were on. The lightest vote ever polled in a primary election in Boston was cast.

Many Seek Recounts.

As the usual aftermath of the close fights in the primary election, recount papers were taken out by a number of the candidates at the office of the board of election commissioners to-day.

Bernard "Tom" Gillis, whose ward committee ticket was beaten by the McLelland forces by ninety-seven votes will have a recount on Ward 1. Councilman Frank Goodwin's ticket which was defeated by the Graves ticket in Ward 1, also desires another count.

Edsel L. Collins, candidate for Representative, defeated by six votes in Ward 15; James A. Hart, candidate for Representative in Ward 24, beaten by thirty-five votes; John F. McCarthy, candidate for Representative in Ward 16, beaten by sixteen votes; Representative Luther A. Cleveland beaten for re-election in Ward 20 by twenty-three votes; Councilman James J. Brennan of Ward 3, defeated for Representative nomination by fifty-one votes; and Representative Joan F. Romanese of Ward 23, who was renominated and high man on the ticket, all seek recounts.

The recounts will begin at Faneuil Hall on next Monday morning.

Interest centred in the contest for the Democratic Councillor nomination in the Third district, where the nomination is equivalent to election and where for weeks a warm battle has been on between Lawrence O'Sullivan and Representative Wilson F. Murray.

Murray won handily, carrying twelve of the twenty-two Boston wards included in the district and all four of the Cambridge wards. O'Sullivan carried only Wards 9, 12, 13, 14 and 15. The vote was: Murray, 12,390; O'Sullivan, 8,952.

Senator Fisk Beaten.

Senator James H. Doyle, after a campaign of handshaking on both sides, won the Democratic senatorial nomination in the Fourth District over Jeremiah F. Good. Doyle had the support of Chairman Donovan of the city Committee, while Good had the backing of Alderman Curley. Donovan's ward ran up a handsome vote for Doyle, and while they delivered Ward 17 to Good by a vote of almost two to one, Doyle won out in the district by a vote of 2,343 to 1,736.

Leon C. Bolley Tinkham won the Republican nomination for the Senate in the Fifth district, defeating Representative Myron E. Pierce of Ward 11 by 256 votes. Senator Fiske made a poor showing.

Senators Richard S. Feeley in the Third District and Joseph H. O'Connor in the Sixth were both renominated. Both received flattering endorsements.

Chairman Donovan's forces for ward control, but the few contained surprises. Ward 1, Charlestown, carried by the county early in the year from the chairmanship of the Republican City committee, by a vote had not been elected a member of the ward committee, came to the front in his old stamping ground and defeated Thomas F. Kelly, who had been elected in 1908 with the backing of the Donovan forces.

Lodge Machine Smashed.

All the Democratic leaders carried their tickets for ward control with the exception of Judge Edward L. Logan, who fell down hard in Ward 14. Ex-Mayor Joseph J. Norton regained control of the ward committee. In East Boston Alderman Joseph A. Conry was elected in his contest in the ward committee. Alderman Timothy Moynihan of Ward 1 is credited with having defeated Joseph Ford, who had thrown himself, including that of the ward committee, in the fight for a seat in the Senate in the Seventh District.

The fight against Daniel J. Kelly in the election of Representative William D. Wilcox in Ward 11 was directed by Mayor Joseph J. Norton regained control of the ward committee. In East Boston Alderman Joseph A. Conry was elected in his contest in the ward committee. Alderman Timothy Moynihan of Ward 1 is credited with having defeated Joseph Ford, who had thrown himself, including that of the ward committee, in the fight for a seat in the Senate in the Seventh District.

PARKHURST FAVORS STIMSON AS MAYOR

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—The Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst returned from Europe with his wife on the steamship Oceanic to-day. In discussing the mayoralty situation he declared he believed former District Attorney Stimson to be the most desirable candidate. When he was asked what he thought of the dismissal of Commissioner Bingham of police courts, Mr. Parkhurst said: "It seems to be in line with the Hitz Mayor's policy. I do not think Bingham filled the bill as police commissioner, but I do think he was a good man. You can't put a greenhorn into office and expect him to succeed right away."

RICH CONVICT ARRESTED AT DOOR OF JAIL

George F. Swain, sixty years of age, who was to-day released from the House of Correction, where he had served a three months' sentence for larceny in Lowell, was arrested just as he emerged a free man by State Detective Keating and taken to the State Prison, where he will have to finish nine years of a twenty-five years' sentence.

Swain has inherited three fortunes while doing time for petty stealing. He has a long criminal record, and has done time in New England, New York and New Jersey.

In 1893 Judge Sherman sentenced Swain to twenty-five years' imprisonment as an habitual criminal. After Swain had served eight years Governor Crane became interested in him when the convict fell heir to $70,000 by the death of the $1,500,000 Trull estate. On December 20, 1901, Governor Crane pardoned Swain on the condition that he would live honestly in the future.

While Swain was in prison the estate of Hiram Swain fell heir to an estate of $15,000 or more.

About two months after he had been granted his liberty Swain was arrested charged with issuing worthless checks. He was promptly sent back to State Prison to finish out his former sentence. This was in February of 1902.

Both fortunes Swain came into his third fortune, this time receiving $20,000. Friends rallied to his aid and prominent among them was Governor's Counselor Edward P. Graves. Governor Draper sent Swain's case to his Council, which unanimously voted to be pardoned.

Governor Draper at once published his action on the condition that if he behaved himself for a year his pardon would become absolute. Swain was released from Charlestown State Prison on April 8 of this year, after serving eight more years of his original twenty-five.

He was arrested in Lowell on June 22 for stealing a horse and buggy. He gave the name of John Smith, but his real identity was soon discovered.

The police nine asked for a return game to "get back." The fire department team, under the management of James J. Maloney, Fire Commissioner Parker's stenographer, has been coming strong during the last two months, having won eight of the last nine games played.

TROOPS HALT JEWISH MASSACRE IN RUSSIA; MOB LEADERS GO FREE

NEW YORK, Sept. 22. A special cable cable to a protest to Russia and demand that the massacres of Jews there forever cease and that no civilized nation should enter The Hague peace conference with Russia until she puts a stop to the massacres is the belief of Max Mitchell, superintendent of the Federated Jewish Charities. Mr. Mitchell today said:

"If the atrocities, which are reported in Russia are true, it is said indeed. It is simply a mockery to the century in which we are living. The only intelligible relief is money, because nothing can be done for those who have perished. For those whose homes have been ruined and who have been deprived of their occupations, and left penniless and naked, help must be sent immediately.

"No one but the inhaled be cared for, but this relief is only temporary. There must be a permanent body of this help sent some in the form of an international protest from the powers against the action of Russia in allowing such crimes to take place within her realm.

"I believe Russia led in the organization of The Hague. The rest of the powers ought to refuse to let the conference go with Russia unless she pledges herself to stop such lahlawful atrocities."

EUROPE REJECTS RUSSIAN DENIAL OF MASSACRES

LONDON, Sept. 22. The denial of the latest Kieff massacre of Jews, given out from the chancellory of Premier Stolypin in St. Petersburg, with the assurance that there had been some trouble, was accepted in London today as the usual Russian denial of anti-Jewish outrages. A report was received from St. Petersburg early today, confirming the earlier Berlin dispatches that clothing had continued for days in Kieff, culminating with the slaughter of twenty men, women and children after many had previously been put to death in the most brutal manner.

The admission that reactionaries had precipitated some pogroms at Kieff, the report and the reports and been grossly exaggerated, was taken to indicate that the usual screen of secrecy is being cast over the real condition by Russian officialdom. The continental press shows an inclination to accept the reports of murder and violence at Kieff as fact.

WOMEN WEEP AT THE BIER OF GOV. JOHNSON

ST. PAUL, Minn., Sept. 22.—Thousands of men and women, who had admired Governor Johnson in his lifetime, visited the State Capitol today, where his body lay in state, for their last view of his face. All day there was a continuous line of sadfaced people waiting for a chance to say farewell to the most popular Chief Executive Minnesota ever had. There were many pathetic scenes at the bier of the dead Chief. Women wept and fought to keep back the tears as they looked for the last time at the features of the man whose gallant fight against overwhelming odds won the admiration of the entire country.

No such funeral has ever been held in other men in the history of the State. It seemed as though every man, woman and child in St. Paul and in the cities and towns around had come to the Capitol to honor the State's dead. They came in carriages, wagons, automobiles and on foot. Every incoming train was crowded.

The body of his youngest here late yesterday morning from Watertown, S. D., where the Governor died early yesterday morning. It was taken to the Capitol building Thursday afternoon at the Presbyterian church on St. Peter and Governor Johnson will be laid to rest in a grave beside that of his wife in Oakland cemetery. The services will be simple.

Governor Johnson's successor is Adolph O. Eberhart of St. Paul, who was sworn in as Governor by Chief Justice Start of the Supreme Court.

Telegrams to Governor Johnson have come from prominent men of all parties in all parts of the country. Yesterday Taft sent a telegram to Mrs. Johnson expressing his deep sorrow and declaring that Governor Johnson was a national figure of great ability and great courage and a credit to the country. The President made this statement:

"He was a wonderful man. He added to it a charming personality and made many friends and admirers even among his political opponents. He was a man of great courage and of outrageous gifts and he officiated. That a man of his gifts and of his capacity for great public usefulness should be taken away at the age of forty-five must be a loss to the country of national regret."

Archbishop Ireland said of Governor Johnson: "Seldom has there arisen among the people of Minnesota a nobler and more fascinating type of the merchant citizenship. In private life he was a model husband and father; in public life he was the earnest, the conscientious servant of the people."

W. J. Bryan said: "His whole career will be a source of inspiration and his personal qualities converted his enemies into friends."

HELP! CAN YOU MAKE A REAL IRISH STEW?

Here is a Macedonian cry for help that the AMERICAN hopes will be heeded by its readers:

Editor AMERICAN:

Help me, quick! What is an Irish stew? I've been living in Boston a few months and one of my favorite dishes is Irish stew. But I cannot get a real Irish stew in this town. What is it?

I see some restaurants the Irish stew is made up of left-over roast beef and potatoes, with a watery gravy. If in this, in other places Irish stew is composed of raw beef, fresh vegetables and potatoes, and to other places some green peppers are added.

But none of these are the Irish stew as my mother made it when I was a lad in Donegal.

Will some of the AMERICAN readers, or the chefs of our hotels please help me out, sending me a recipe for the real article? An Irish stew properly made is one of the best dishes to be eaten.

I will pay $5 for the best recipe.

LAWRENCE O'REILLY.

The well. The AMERICAN will pay $5 for the best recipe. Come on, everybody. Let us know just what a real Irish stew is. It sounds good.

Everybody ought to help O'Reilly.

For they speak of plain English Good luck to O'Reilly.

Who is not doing well.

MAJOR NUTT, TINIEST MAN, DIES AT 68

MAJ. RODINA NUTT, SMALLEST MAN IN WORLD, NOW DEAD

Major Rodina Nutt, of No. 47 Norfolk street, Dorchester, known as "the smallest man in the world," died at 8:25 A.M. today of heart failure after an illness of a year and a half. His wife, who is five feet ten inches in height, while the Major is three feet ten inches, was at his bedside when he passed away.

Major Nutt is the last survivor of the famous Lilliputians who traveled for years with the Barnum & Bailey Circus. His brother, Commodore Nutt, had traveled with Tom Thumb and his diminutive aggregation and for some time the Major was in Thumb's company.

For nearly nineteen years the Major had resided in Dorchester, where he was engaged in the real estate business. While he was exhibiting he traveled all over the world. He crossed the Atlantic nine times, the Pacific once and the Indian Ocean once. He was sixty-eight years of age last October.

Major Nutt was King Edward VII's fifth cousin by marriage. His sister is now living in Manchester, Eng., and is a woman of normal stature. In 1885, with his brother, the Commodore, General Tom Thumb and Mrs. Thumb, the Major appeared before Queen Victoria and twenty-four of the royal family at the court of St. James.

MAD CHASE FOR ALLEGED THIEF IN SOUTH END

After a long chase through several streets of the South End in which a large crowd of citizens participated Patrolman Louis Toomey of the East Dedham street police station captured Joseph Burns, nineteen years old, and claiming residence at No. 231 Northampton street. He was locked up charged with the larceny of a solid gold watch valued at $40 from Percival Cain of No. 15 Granite street, Somerville.

Cain was walking along Shawmut avenue when he was accosted by Burns, who asked him for a match. While Cain was searching for a match Burns, it is alleged, reached into his pocket, snatched his watch and ran down Shawmut avenue in the direction of Northampton street.

Cain started after him, and his cries attracted the attention of Patrolman Toomey, who joined in the chase with a large crowd of citizens trailing in his wake.

Burns turned into Cowing street, closely followed by Toomey, and the chase led through several side streets back into Shawmut avenue and through Warrenton street to Washington, where Toomey succeeded in catching Burns, and after a short struggle placed him under arrest.

TAFT GREETED IN DENVER BY SOCIETY FOLK

DENVER, Col., Sept. 22.—Denver saw the last of President Taft on his 13,000 mile trip today, when he left the home of Senator Hughes in an automobile bound for the Summer home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas F. Walsh. Social and official Denver caught a glimpse or him later at Wolhurst where Mr. and Mrs. Walsh had hundreds of friends invited to meet the President.

For two hours the President greeted the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Walsh in the big sun parlor, and then he left for Colorado Springs, his special car remaining on the track just outside the gates of Wolhurst during the morning. A plot car ran out over the Denver and Rio Grande just two minutes ahead of the President's special.

Newspaper people on their way to the Gunnison turned opening near Montrose went on the pilot car. The first stop made by the President's train was at Colorado Springs, where the arrival was greeted by thousands of people. The Taft party rode through the streets of Colorado Springs in automobiles and then Mr. Taft made a brief speech. The train reached Pueblo in time to give the President an opportunity to visit the State fair in progress there. The next stop will be at Glenwood Springs.

ARREST BOYS IN MALDEN AS BURGLAR BAND

Three grammar school boys in Malden were arrested today, charged with a series of robberies, in which they are alleged to have secured jewelry and silverware valued at nearly $200. They were given a hearing in the juvenile court and the cases continued a week.

The boys are Carl Smith, fourteen, of No. 91 Pine street; Albert T. Kirkpatrick, sixteen, of No. 760 Highland avenue, and Stanley G. Gorham, sixteen, of No. 33 Magnolia street. The Smith boy was too young to hold, and he was released in the custody of his parents.

The police say that Smith and Kirkpatrick robbed the home of Alonzo H. Brown, No. 52 Pine street, on September 3 and took away $50 worth of jewelry. They declare that two days later the three boys entered the home of Morris Martin, No. 2 Pelissier place and while there secured nothing that they broke into it the second and got about $100 worth of silverware. The boys, the police say, was found in the children's boy's room, concealed under loose boards.

DOESN'T WANT CATS LICENSED

When the annual report of Edward Rose Peacock, State ornithologist, was recently printed several recommendations for the protection of bird life appeared in it, some was started the story that Mr. Peacock had advocated the licensing of cats. He took the matter up with the matter provided for the canine tribes.

"You ought to see my mail ever since!" said Mr. Peacock in a letter to the BOSTON AMERICAN today.

"Please say that I never said it. Really, I didn't. The report said just what I said and a word in it advocating any such scheme. I received letters enough to fill the general postoffice; complimentary, threatening, abusive letters, wedding letters, breathing threats of vengeance and assassination, letters telling me I ought to get a license myself, in fact letters and letters. The thing was printed in some of the Boston newspapers while I was out of the city. Please say I never said anything like that nor held such views nor have advocated them."

25,000 AWAIT ARBITRATORS

NEW BEDFORD, Sept. 22.—Textile workers in this city, numbering 25,000, are wondering why the State Board of Arbitration has not set a date for a conference between representatives of the Textile Council and the representatives of the Manufacturers' Association before the arbitration board. Neither strikes it was expected that the State Board would call the conference today or tomorrow. But no word has come.

Sentiment has increased the resistance of mill workers. Predictions are heard that by that time they would have something to report to the other mill cities. The New Bedford mill workers have asked for a wage increase of 10 per cent. This was the amount their wages were cut in the panic year.

Mr. Barry of the State Board of Arbitration stated today that the only reason why no date had been set for a conference was because the board had found that the manufacturers' association has not got all its members together to consider the conference question. The Textile Council has agreed to arbitration.

The Shams to Look Out For In Evaporated Milk

Our purpose is not to denounce rival brands. We simply wish to compel them to give for the money somewhere near what you get in Van Camp's.

All evaporated milk is sterilized, and all brands are free from germs.

The poorest grades sold are better than raw milk, and immeasurably more safe.

But, now that evaporated milk is so common, it is well to know how to get the most for your money.

So, in our mutual interest, we tell of these shams.

Sham No. 1
Condensed Milk

Sweetened condensed milk contains about 40 per cent of sugar. As a result, the milk is thin and watery.

The sugar was originally used to preserve it. But the discovery of sterilization made sugar unnecessary.

To buy condensed milk means to waste half of your money. First, because it is nearly half sugar. Second, because of the scanty cans—only 12 ounces for 10 cents.

If you want a sweetened milk, the cheapest way is to add the sugar yourself.

In Van Camp's you get 16 ounces for 10 cents—exactly one-third more. And Van Camp's is all milk.

Condensed milk, because of the sugar, is unfit for cooking. Van Camp's serves every purpose.

It gives you for cooking a whole rich milk which is always convenient. It gives to milk dishes a flavor and richness which one never can get from raw milk.

Condensed is a profitable milk for the maker. That is why this old-fashioned milk is continued. But it serves for only a limited use, and it costs twice as much as Van Camp's.

Sham No. 2
Inferior Milks

We buy nothing but Holstein cows—the world's best breed. They are robust, contented, famous for their vitality.

Mongrel cows cost less money, of course, but the difference fully shows in the milk.

The milk of common cows, evaporated, costs just as much as Van Camp's. Its value is considerably less.

We evaporate from our Holstein milk a full two-thirds of the water. The result is a milk as thick as thick cream. Every can will show 28 per cent solids—8 per cent butter fat.

When this milk is reduced to the basis of milkman's milk, the cost is about six cents per quart.

If we took out only one-third of the water, we could make more money. But the loss would fall on you.

When someone says, "This milk is as good as Van Camp's," don't take it unless, by actual comparison, you find it as rich as ours.

Sham No. 3
Small Five-Cent Cans

To this sham we confess to be parties, For we, like the others, put up 5-cent cans.

But we do so only because mistaken people demand them. And we tell you the facts about them.

The 5-cent can—whether of Van Camp's or others—contains but six ounces of milk.

The 10-cent can—the large can of Van Camp's—contains 16 ounces or a full pint.

So the large can gives you one-third more than the small for your money. The difference in a year is considerable.

Some people use the small cans for fear the large won't keep. They are wrong. The opened can will keep till you use it up.

Some buy the small cans because they use the milk on the table only. They are losing its greatest service. Van Camp's for cooking is cheaper than raw milk, and vastly more convenient. And it gives you the whole rich milk, such as you don't get from the milkman.

In Van Camp's you get nothing but milk. You get Holstein milk reduced to the minimum. You get a full pint for 10 cents, and discounts when you buy cases. Don't pay the same price for evaporated milk that falls below this standard.

COOK REFUSES TO 'SLING MUD' AT HIS RIVAL

detention at the big lead we should almost certainly have made it that time."

"Will the Pole ever be reached again?"

Will Never Go Again.

"Not by me. I cannot answer for others. It has required many years of hard knocks for me to learn how and while I do not wish to dissuade any one from attempting the Pole, I think it will be some time before my experience is repeated and my photographs duplicated."

"Is it possible that the Eskimo will undertake it?"

"Never by themselves. The Pole has no value to them, nor do I think they would follow a leader whom they had not thoroughly tried and in whom they had implicit confidence. Life in their normal condition is good enough for them, and they appreciate polar work only for its rewards of arms, ammunition and boats."

Dismissing the scientific results of the expedition, he said:

"Until the observations are worked out, it is difficult to speak ecept in the most general and popular terms. I greatly regret the breaking of the sounding apparatus at the Pole, or only five miles or so from it. It is something, though, to know that the depth there is nearly two miles, which goes far to show that the Arctic Ocean is as I have believed."

"How do you account for the more frequent leads last Spring than three years ago?"

Work Must Go On.

"Merely changes in conditions due to natural causes. Nowhere do the forces of nature work more surely and certainly than in the Arctic, and that brings me to something which I should particularly like to say, that much of the value of this year's work will go for nothing if it is allowed to stop here. All the year round stations may be maintained at many points up to the eighty-third parallel field. A party may work in favorable conditions still further north, and all the secrets of nature may be wrested by intelligent international co-operation."

"Is it worth while?"

"That is the old question over again. What is worth while, and is anything wort while? All depends upon your standard of values. Electricity is worth to-day fore than Franklin estimated than when he was trying to draw lightning from the clouds and as for myself I have always held with Sam Fessenden, like General Hubbard, President of the Peary Arctic Club and myself of Maine, that 'God Almighty hates a quitter,' and it was partly my faith in that kept me 'on the job.'

Coal in Greenland.

"There are other any many better things in the world than money, and even Arctic expeditions properly handled might justify themselves on that ground. There's unlimited coal in sight now in Greenland, and lots more in Ellsmere Land, only waiting for some one to come and carry it away."

"What are you going to do next?"

"Get acquaintedwith my famly and as fast as possible put into shape the results of my work.

"Besides the popular account much scientific work remains to be done and I want to see it is all finally cleaned up and disposed of shipshape before I give up the helm."

"What will be done with the Roosevelt?"

"That is for the Peary Arctic Club, her owners, to determine."

"I IGNORE PEARY AND HIS CHARGES," SAYS DR. COOK

Ick A. Cook made a statement at the Waldorf Astoria Hotel to-day in which he said that he intended to ignore Peary entirely in setting forth his claim to having discovered the North Pole a year before Peary is said to have reached there. At the same time Dr. Cook declared he was through with Polar exploration, and as he made this statement he looked meaningly at his wife, who smiled triumphantly. It looked like what the song writers would call a case of "My Wife Won't Let Me."

The Brooklyn explorer declared that he had ignored Peary only after having submitted to a grueling examination at the hands of a body of newspaper men. He answered every question readily and the examination went along in such a way that Captain Peary's name was mentioned very frequently.

Finally Dr. Cook, with an impatient gesture, exclaimed:

"I am not going to get into any controversy with Mr. Peary. Mr. Peary is not the judge of my affairs."

"Will you meet Peary when he returns?" one of the reporters asked.

"In what way?" asked Dr. Cook. "I don't understand what you mean by the expression 'meet Peary.'"

"With four ounce gloves," said a facetious bystander.

Dr. Cook did not seem to relish the remark, but as everyone laughed he finally joined in and said:

"I do not think that will be necessary."

Dr. Cook declared that he never felt better in his life.

He said he would make all of his records public within two months and that he had not been asked by any American scientific body to submit his data. Dr. Cook said it would not be necessary to await the return of Harry Whitney, the American sportsman to whom he gave his scientific instruments in the far North.

When he was asked about the dispatch from Sydney which quoted Matt Henson, Peary's negro attendant, as saying that the Eskimo who went with Dr. Cook stated that they were never out of sight of land, he said:

"Those Eskimos are doing just as I told them to do. They are not telling anyone about our expedition. I told them, just as I told Whitney and young Pritchard, not to say anything of my discovery. I shall have the two Eskimos here next year. That is not a very long time to wait, in view of such an important matter as this."

"Dr. Cook, will you make a reply to Mr. Peary's repeated charges that you did not reach the North Pole," he was asked.

"Mr. American," said Dr. Cook, addressing the AMERICAN reporter, "you may say for me once and for all that I have nothing to say regarding Mr. Peary. Whatever he has done is his, and I have not one word to say against him. What I have done is mine, and I cannot see that Mr. Peary can possibly say or do anything that requires any answer.

"I discoverd the North Pole. I have plenty of proof, moral and physical, that I did so. I will not enter into a mudslinging contest with Mr. Peary, who cannot possibly be concerned in my discovery."

Dr. Cook, as he spoke, was resting one arm upon the right shoulder of John R. Bradley, who financially backed his expedition. He was recuperating after receiving 5,000 friends who called at the Bushwick Club, Brooklyn, to meet him.

"If you will not talk of Peary, will you make plain the seeming mystery that covers Harry Whitney's part in the announcement of concealment of the discovery of the Pole by yourself?" was the next question put to Dr. Cook.

"There Is No Mystery."

"Gladly," he replied. "There is no mystery. Harry Whitney knows that I discovered the Pole, not only from what I told him, but from what he learned from others. Mr. Whitney is a gentleman. I entrusted him with certain facts under pledge of secrecy, and he has done exactly as I knew he would. He has kept my secret, but will tell the truth when asked."

"It has been stated that you left certain of your personal belongings with Mr. Whitney. Just what did you give him?"

"I gave Mr. Whitney one sextant, one or two compasses and a few sheets of paper. That is all."

"Did you tell him you had reached the Pole?"

"Yes, I told him. Pritchard and one other man heard the conversation. All promised to keep the secret."

Didn't Do It "For Pleasure."

"I said I would not speak of Peary. I repeat. I dragged my way there and I dragged my way out. I did not do it for pleasure."

"I left Etah and made the journey overland to Annotook because I wished to get away from the land ice as quickly as possible. There was nothing unusual about my trip. I had no certainty of getting a boat from Etah. No boats were due there, and had I waited it would simply have been upon the chance of a relief ship.

"At Annotook, however, steamers call at regular intervals. I knew if I could get there it would be best, so I risked the journey overland. It was one of the hardest stretches of my trip."

"Did you doubt if you waited at Etah that Peary would bring you back?"

"There's the subject again that I will not discuss."

"Why did you leave anything with Mr. Whitney?"

"I simply gave him all the unnecessary articles I had. The instruments I no longer needed. I wished to travel as light as possible. On that trip every pound counts. Whitney thought I was doing the right thing."

"Were there no conditions of sea, air, sky, stars, sun or anything you noted that distinguished the Pole?"

"There were peculiarities of the horizon that distinguished the top of the earth from any other spot I have seen. I will tell of these at some other time. As regards other conditions there were but few changes from what could be noted as the Pole is approached. These observations I wish to place before my critics in official form before discussing them."

"Where are the data of your trip?"

"With me."

WIRELESS TO AID BRITISH PARTY IN ANTARCTIC DASH

LONDON, Sept. 22.—While America is welcoming her polar heroes, the plans here for the Antarctic dash next Summer are going forward with redoubled vigor. Captain Robert F. Scott, who is in charge of the plans, today made public further details. Captain Scott will have under his command many of those who followed him in his former Antarctic dash in 1900-4. His second in command, Lieutenant Evans, is at present on the staff of the navigation school at Portsmouth. He made a voyage to the Antarctic regions as second officer in command of the relief ship Morning. The steamer Discovery will be fitted with the Anschutz gyroscope compass, which is non-magnetic and derives its directive power from the earth's motion combined with gravity. Owing to the vicinity of the South magnetic pole the ordinary magnetic compass practically loses its pointing power in the latitudes in which the Discovery will cruise. The Discovery will enter the southern ice fields in December.

The expedition will be equipped with wireless instruments as a means of communicating between the various supporting parties and the ship.

FLEE FROM MANIAC DOWN FIRE ESCAPE

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—After he had slashed his wife half a dozen times, Charles Anderson was held at bay by the wife, another woman and two girls at No. 2915 Eighth avenue to-day. Barricaded in a front room they held off Anderson, who is supposedly insane till they could flee down a fire escape. Anderson fought a terrific battle with Patrolman Mitchell on the roof and was getting the best of the policeman when aid arrived. Anderson and his wife were taken to the Harlem Hospital.

HURLS THIEF FIVE STORIES TO DEATH

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—William Ropso, a civil engineer, discovered a burglar crawling into the bath room window of his apartment at 1880 Bathgate avenue, to-day, and fired two shots at the intruder, both bullets taking effect. The burglar lurched backward out of the window, fell five floors, regained his feet and crawled a block and a half away to 176th street and Bathgate avenue, where he died. The man had lowered himself from the roof by a rope.

FRAMINGHAM GIRL STRUCK BY TRAIN

Cripled for life and in serious condition, Miss Mary Mullaney, an employe of Long's shoe factory, lies in the Framingham Hospital as the result of being struck by an express train this morning while on her way to work with her sister. Her view of the oncoming train was cut off by a freight car. She was rushed to the hospital where her leg was amputated. She also suffered from severe scalp wounds and other minor injuries.

CLUBBING TO DEATH OF SAILOR AROUSES SWEDES OF AMERICA

Nothing in years has so stirred up the Swedes of the United States as the SUNDAY AMERICAN'S exposure of police brutality and neglect in the case of the unfortunate Gustaf Bergstedt, the young Swedish sailor who was clubbed to death last July by Policeman William Kelley of the Hanover Street station.

Skandinavia, published today, the oldest and leading organ of the Swedes in America, devotes several columns of its space to the case. Aside from a long news account Skandinavia has a long editorial.

The SUNDAY AMERICAN'S story of Bergstedt's tragic end spread rapidly among the Swedes of New England. More than fifty inquiries were made Monday noon from Swedish unions and societies and individual members for the privilege of burying the unfortunate youth's body.

The Lodge Kilpian, of the Order of Vasa, by a unanimous vote decided to conduct the funeral Sunday, and it will be made a public demonstration by the loyal Swedish people against the conditions which made Bergstedt's untimely end possible.

The lodge will hold the funeral at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon from the City Hospital chapel. Undertaker Claes Tallberg of No. 1,011 Tremont street has charge. Some of the most prominent Swedes in New England have announced their intention to attend the long-deferred obsequies of their unhappy young countryman. His death and the great grief that must come to his aged parents in far-off Karlborg in the loved Fatherland is talked of in hundreds of Swedish homes and there are many tears and silent prayers for the friendless lad who died so far from home and those who loved him above all else in this world.

"Sailor Had a Thin Skull!"

The club is talked about. The club, an emblem of barbarism and brutality. The club which is still used in the twentieth century in civilized America.

Not the spiked club of the Middle Ages, which crushed its victim outright, but the police club of to-day, which in some cases only lays open the scalp of its victim, but also on some occasions kills the victim slowly in a hospital or an insane asylum.

A Swedish sailor, yet a youth, enters a place where liquor is dispensed, partly dispensed for the benefit of the keeper of the place, and partly for the revenue of the government, which uses this revenue mainly to pay for the police club. The place is in polite American-English called "the saloon."

The sailor comes under the influence of liquor dispensed there by the sanction of the government. A brawl ensues and then the sailor is struck by the club he himself has helped the government to buy. The club is carried by a strong arm, directed by a sober brain, and fulfils its deadly mission.

The sailor is felled to the ground, his skull is opened and his brain oozing from the wound. He is carried to a hospital and dies after fifty-four days of suffering and agony.

Then the medical examiner makes the autopsy prescribed by law and finds that the sailor had a thin skull.

All skulls crushed by the club are too thin. That is not the victim's fault, nor the man's who carries the club. It is the fault of the victim's Maker, but He cannot be held liable at the inquest.

The victim's friends were supposed to be unknown by those in authority. To be sure, papers giving clues to information about his friends were found in the victim's clothes, but who cared to read them? They were written in a foreign language, which those in authority knew was Swedish; but who cared to have them translated?

No Notice to Friends.

In the other end of the hospital building were employes who could read that language, but who cared to send for them?

The dead one was a stranger in this great land and his friends numbered perhaps not half a dozen here. And if he had a thousand friends in the city, how could they know? No one told them that their friend's body was in the morgue, to shortly be buried in the potter's field, or be given to a medical school, if they did not come forward and claim it.

No one spoke aloud about that dead body so that it could be heard by the people. Only the keeper of the morgue and his assistant whispered about it, because it was to them a burden to keep the body. Those in authority kept silent. Maybe because there was the story of a club, and they themselves felt ashamed for that.

Far away in the old home sit the aged father and mother, wondering about their wandering boy. They do not know about the American club, and in their country civilization had discarded the club a century ago.

The aged father and mother do not know that the mutilated remains of their boy lie in the cooling room in the morgue, waiting to be disposed of. If they knew it they would send their last dollar to far away America, that a grave may be procured for their boy. And the seven weeks the remains lay in the morgue would have allowed plenty of time to arrange matters, if those in authority had a particle of feeling for what is human and decent, like people in other places. But no one informed the aged father and mother, and only those in authority knew about it and kept silent.

This is no legend, but real history of what happened in the metropolis of New England in the year 1909. Is this the only case of such kind? We doubt it, and in fact, we have found another case, now two years old, in the very same district of Boston.

Morgue Keeper Silent.

Now, for the benefit of the people, light has been thrown on this dark page in the history of a big city's foremost institution and people talk about it. But the keeper of the morgue and his assistant, they do not even whisper now. They are silent, because they have to be.

And finally, a few questions to whom it may concern:

Why was nothing read in the daily papers at the time when a stranger was brought to the hospital with a broken skull?

Why did not those in authority at the Boston City Hospital send a message about the death to the dead sailor's place of lodging, when his friends had sent one before when he was alive and begged them to do it?

Why did not those in authority try to get information from the consul of the country of which the sailor was a citizen, or to get information from the Sailors' Union, if he belonged there?

Why was it not reported in the daily papers, as it is done in other cases, that this body awaited claimants?

Why had, according to his own statement, the medical examiner, contrary to law, not "forthwith," as the law commands, made a report to the District Attorney, instead of waiting two months after the death and, we presume, autopsy?

Who will and can truthfully and satisfactorily to law, humanity and decency answer these questions?

Until they are answered in such manner, we may be pardoned for the belief that a Benjamin F. Butler is needed again in Massachusetts.

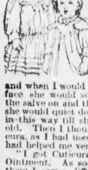
SKIN-TORTURED BABIES CURED

Humor Kept Tiny Girl's Face Sore for Months—Grew Worse in Spite of Doctor's Prescription—Screamed when Salves were Applied—Brother Suffered from Tetter.

CUTICURA'S ACTION QUICK AND EFFECTIVE



"I will explain about Kathryn Rishel's cure. She is four years old now. When she was two months, she had tetter or eczema on her face. It commenced on her cheeks and kept spreading till it was almost all over her face. I had a doctor to treat it but it still kept getting worse. I tried many kinds of salve but it only got worse, and when I would grease her poor little face she would scream. I had to put the salve on and then start to walk till she would quiet down. I worried along in this way till she was over one year old. Then I thought I would try Cuticura, as I had used it for myself and it had helped me very much.

"I got Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment. As soon as I began to use them I saw a difference. She did not need to cry when I treated her face. The Cuticura Remedies commenced right away to make it better. I used several boxes of Cuticura Ointment and used Cuticura Soap all the time and her face was healed. She is four years old now and I do not see any signs of the sores. Cuticura certainly did cure her.

"Our little boy had tetter also. He is nearly two. I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment for him and he was soon cured. I used them right away so he didn't get as sore as Kathryn did. Mrs. Blanche Rishel, Clintondale, Pa., Oct. 22, 1908."

For more than thirty years the Cuticura Remedies have been the favorites in tens of thousands of households, for the treatment of eczemas, rashes, itchings, irritations and other torturing, disfiguring humors of the skin and scalp.

MUNSEY AUTOS START ON 2D DAY'S CONTEST

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—Contestants in the Frank A. Munsey automobile reliability run left Philadelphia bright and early to-day for the second day of the run from Washington to Boston and return. While here the contestants and passengers were the guests of the Quaker City Motor Club and the Philadelphia Evening Times.

The drivers and observers were called to a long conference before the start by Referee Trego and points about which they were hazy were cleared up.

When Mr. Trego and his assistants on the technical committee concluded their labors on checking, it was found that fourteen of the twenty-five contesting cars had perfect scores at the end of the first day's run. The honor roll embraced No. 9 Maxwell; No. 26, Reo; No. 12, Pullman; No. 32, Washington; No. 37, Pullman; No. 24, Crawford; No. 11, Maryland; No. 18, Corbin; No. 30, Marmon; No. 36, Elmore; No. 13, Pullman; No. 21, American-Simplex; No. 28, Renault; No. 17, Croxton-Keeton.

Tire troubles delayed some of the cars, but all managed to check in on time allowance being made for delay caused by tire troubles.

BROWN PLAYERS GET TO WORK

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 22.—After a brief rest, following the lively preliminary work at the Gammons farm, near New Bedford, the Brown football squad will get into gear in earnest on Andrews field to-day in the real workout, which immediately precedes the opening of the season. The practice at Gammons has brought out the fact that there are plenty of men in the game who should do well at punting, but the chief weakness of the team this year promises to be in the line. All the members of the squad are in capital condition and ready for the more serious business here.

Kratz's appearance in the practice toward the last of the stay on the farm materially strengthens the line. Kratz is the tall Perkiomen Seminary tackle, who tips the scales of 200 pounds, and he looks good. It now looks as though Ayler and Raquet would rid themselves of their conditions so as to be in the game when the season begins. Both are out at practice. At the ends the team will be strong with Captain Regnier, Ashbaugh, Young and Jarivs, all prominent candidates. Behind the line, Sprackling seems to have the call for first string quarter, with Crowther, who played a star game on the Pawtucket High School last year, a very strong second choice.

The fullback position is left vacant through the graduation of Beytes of last year's eleven, while Aspinwall, who started for that place last season, is not in college. Altdoerffer, who weighs about 175 pounds, and who is hard to stop and fast on his feet, is one of the more likely candidates for this place on the showing made at the farm. If, however, the coming week uncovers some more promising men for fullback, Altdoerffer will be moved to halfback.

EAST AND WEST BOATS TO SAIL

A challenge trophy for 18-footers for the yachtsmen of Cleveland to race for against Massachusetts Bay 18-footers has been offered by Albert W. Finlay, who last week won back the Sumner H. Foster memorial cup from the Cleveland yachtsmen with his 18-footer Dorchen II.

It will be raced for in Massachusetts Bay next season.

The Sumner H. Foster memorial cup is now the property of Mr. Finlay, and it is for the purpose of further stimulating the racing between yachtsmen of the East and the West that he has offered the new cup. Commodore Alexander Winton of the Lakewood Y. C., has said that he will build a boat to come here and race for the trophy, which Mr. Finlay will name La Belle cup, in honor of Mrs. Winton.

MORAN SIGNED FOR N. Y. SIX-DAY RACE

Jimmy Moran, the Chelsea cyclist, has signed up for the annual New York six-day race in December, to ride with Floyd McFarland. This is the team that won last year and put up a new record.

Other teams already hitched are said to be Root and Fogler and Drobach and Halstead.

ALES

CAN'T SEE HOW KETCHEL WILL LICK JOHNSON

Since Johnson's defeat of Al Kaufman, many of the coast scribes give Ketchel small chance to whip the black man. The only hope he has, they say, is that Johnson may blow up at the end, if Ketchel can escape that tearing right uppercut. Johnson was legweary and tired at the end of the ten rounds with Kaufman.

It is hardly fair to harp on Johnson's condition in that bout, as he had just got into the swing of training. He will be in tip-top shape when he meets Ketchel. Kaufman was in great shape for that contest but failed to put an effective glove on Johnson, while the black champion stood off and picked him to pieces.

In the clinches Johnson tossed Al around as though he had been a Japanese doll. That same strength and weight will play an important part in the fight October 12. Unless Ketchel sets Johnson on the run with the viciousness of his attack, it would seem that he has selected a superhuman task for himself.

Billy Papke is, in turn, making a childish howl over the pictures of his fight with Ketchel. He claims that one of his bad rounds has been reprinted and pasted on to the role of films so as to make it appear that Ketchel had all the best of it. Doctored or not, there is enough action shown to prove that Papke deliberately backed away and hid his jaw when Ketchel was fought dizzy, hardly able to keep his two feet planted under him.

Packey McFarland has changed managers again—that is, he has dispensed with his latest sponsor. He has given Nate Lewis his walking papers. Fussy youth, is Patrick.

Willus Britt denied before leaving town that he was trying to coax Johnny Frayne away from Heinie Rafael.

LATIN BOYS IN FIRST LINE-UP

Preparatory work by school football players is now on, and with the opening games close at hand the practice is harder than any to date. Coaches in many instances have donned their football garb and got down to work, showing how things should be done.

Coach Fred J. O'Brien of Boston Latin was very active in this respect. To-day the first scrimmage of the season will be held, so that the players can become acquainted with their positions for the initial clash of the season which will be with Groton Saturday.

The Somerville high school candidates had the benefit of the coaching of Tom Comins, the former Bowdoin captain, and Bill Sharry, in addition to that of Steve Mahoney and Allie Dickinson. The greatest weakness in the Somerville team is in the line, and Comins, being one of the best tackles ever turned out by the Red and Blue, is expected to help greatly in remedying this weakness.

The injury to Bob Garland's shoulder is more serious than was first supposed. An X-ray disclosed the fact that some small bones had been fractured and may keep him out of the game all season. With the announcement that Jim Hurley, the crack halfback, will return to school comes word that Charley Dickerman is out for a while because of studies.

GOLF GOSSIP
NEWS OF THE LINKS

"The impression seems to be gaining ground that the women's national meeting at Merion may be made unusually interesting by the presence of several capable players from across the seas. Miss Dorothy Campbell, present queen of the British women, accompanied by several actorines of less ability, is likely to put in her appearance, and if this good news turns out to be true the affair will take on an international color that should add greatly to its importance, and the value of the title at stake. The Quaker fraternity has high hopes that another championship will be found in 'our midst' after the smoke of battle has cleared away, but the threatened invasion of the foreign experts will make the task of landing that honor more difficult than it has been for several years."

Home golfers at the Commonwealth Country Club seemed to know how to win. Great difficulty is found in playing many of the holes, particularly the seventeenth, which is a most absurd position. The evident attempt to make the holes more difficult was by all means accomplished, and the scores show that even the best players are at a loss as to how some should be played.

Mr. Harry Ayer of the Brae Burn Country Club is the instigator of the foursome match to be played between the two Ross brothers and Tom McNamara and Mike Brady this month. This competition will be of great interest from a professional standpoint as considerable question has arisen as to whether the Ross brothers, although almost invincible as a pair, could defeat the two younger but very capable "pro's." Both Brady and Tommy "Mc" have performed splendidly in the national and state meetings and will do their utmost to bring victory on their side.

On Tuesday, September 28, the annual three-day golf championship of the Boston Athletic Association will be held at Wollaston. In addition to the qualification round on Tuesday there will also be an eighteen-hole medal play handicap, with prizes for the best net and gross scores.

Brae Burn will hold an open fourscore tourney for women on Thursday that will be attended by most of the prominent women players in the State.

Quite a number of prominent golfers will go to New York Saturday for an invitation tournament at the St. Andrews Golf Club. Harold C. Richard is doing the inviting and I. W. Small, T. B. Fuller, A. G. Lockwood, B. S. Evans, H. P. Farrington, T. A. Ashley, E. M. Taft, A. C. Hefferman, C. E. Eaton and A. L. Johnson are among the number slated to go.

The open tournaments at the Merrimac Valley Country Club and the Allston Golf Club on Friday and Saturday of this week should receive a representative gathering of golfers providing the weather is at all favorable.

WILL SETTLE QUESTION.

When Lew Powell and Johnny Frayne settle their difference in San Francisco in the near future, the lightweight situation will begin to untangle a bit. The winner is an almost certain opponent for Battling Nelson, and the lightweight championship might rest between the pair. Certain it is that the Dane won't go on and on forever.

Is He There to Stay?

SAM LANGFORD MATCHED WITH THE DIXIE KID

On next Tuesday night the Armory Club will present as the premier attraction at its entertainment the wonderful colored lad, Sam Langford, in a twelve-round contest against the Dixie Kid, a Californian boxer who won a decision over Joe Walcott when the latter was in his prime.

The Dixie Kid has been in New York for the past four months and has won every contest in which he has engaged by the knockout route. Such men as Battling Johnson and Jim Savage have fallen before his knockout punch, and he is confident he can defeat Langford.

This will probably be the last chance that New England will have to see Langford in action, as he has practically agreed to tour England and then go to Australia to box for Hugh McIntosh.

Dixie Kid is the best trial horse that could be found to make Ho! Ho! show some of his marvelous skill, and as three fast preliminaries will take place before the main bout, it should prove one of the greatest shows staged at the Armory Club.

YALE STARS NOW IN LINE

NEW HAVEN, Sept. 22.—The principal additions to the Yale football squad to date are Ted Lilley and Fred Daley, both of whom won their Y's last Fall.

Lilley is the son of the late Governor George L. Lilley and played left tackle in the Princeton and West Point games. Daley is a Cambridge boy, and before coming to Yale was captain at Andover.

Both are in fine shape for the coming season. Members of the squad were ordered to cut out smoking immediately and will not be allowed to remain up after 10 o'clock commencing next week.

The coaches to-day telegraphed to Henry Hobbs, who has been coaching at Andover, ordering him to return immediately in order that he may learn the technical points in the first few days of practice.

• • •

Police Superintendent McQuade of Pittsburg is to allow ten-round bouts to take place in the Smoky City in the future, but the battles will be under the supervision of the police, and any one-sided affairs will not be tolerated. One ten-round bout at each stag will be the limit.

• • •

Sam Wallach has called off the match between Leach Cross and Freddie Corbett, which was to have taken place at the Bedford Club on September 28. For an excuse, Wallach says that Leach's wife is seriously ill and the dentist is in constant attendance, which prevents him from training. Cross says the Murphy match is still on for October 4 at Tom O'Rourke's new club.

Jimmy Kelly is in receipt of several offers for his boys, Bert Keyes and Young O'Leary. The English invasion is about to start. Jim Driscoll, Owen Moran, Freddie Welsh, Johnny Summers, Young Josephs, Digger Stanley and possibly Dan Hague will soon be on their way to America. Driscoll and Moran will come looking for shifty Abe Attell, while Welsh's ambition is to get at one Oscar Battling Matthew Nelson of Hegewisch.

Toby Owens has taken in charge Martin Hefron, the 118-pounder, who was a star in Los Angeles last year, drawing with Eddie Meeney and Danny Webster, and beating several Western boys. Toby is after Kline for his boy and would like to get at the Newark boy at 122 pounds.

BARRY NOW ON CRUTCHES.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 22.—John Barry, shortstop of the Philadelphia American League Baseball Club, who was spiked by "Ty" Cobb in Monday's Detroit game, is on crutches to-day. Connie Mack, manager of the local team, said to-day that Barry's wound is one of the worst ever received by a ball player from another's spikes. Because of the extent of the wound, it is not certain whether Barry will again be able to play this season. No blame is attached to Cobb for the accident.

WAITING FOR JOHNSON.

But since the ridiculous showing of the big, strong Al Kaufman against Johnson many of the Ketchel rooters have changed their opinion, and they say that Ketchel will not be able to win, because he will never be able to overcome Johnson's brute strength. It will take more than a heart of oak to cope with the powerful Texan, they say. October 12 can come just as soon as it wants. We're all waiting.

M'ALEER ACCEPTS WASHINGTON'S TERMS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Sept. 22.—Jim McAleer, manager of the Browns, has agreed upon terms to manage the Washington team next season. This morning McAleer was called on the long distance telephone and after a quarter of an hour talk, terms were agreed upon. It is understood that McAleer gets a block of stock as an inducement to get a winning team.

In discussing the transaction McAleer said: "When the season closes, I shall take a vacation until the spring. Then I will take charge of the Washington team and I am to have entire charge of the players. I have decided not to take them to Texas, but don't know just where we shall go. I am glad to get away from St. Louis as they don't understand me."

FUTURE PIGSKIN STARS.

Captain Makepeace of the champion Hope Street High School eleven that defeated Waltham High last season, with Driscoll of Brookline High and Graustein of Cambridge Latin, are candidates for the Harvard freshman eleven. All three men should make the team with comparative ease.

AUTO RACES AT PIER.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Sept. 22.—It was announced to-day that a big automobile race will be held at Narragansett Pier Park in October, under the auspices of the local automobile clubs. Four of the big drivers have already signified their intention to enter, and many other entries are expected. The track will be banked and put in first-class shape.

BOSTON COLLEGE TEAM.

At a meeting of the freshmen at Boston College it was decided to have a class football team. Thomas L. Gannon of Beachmont, who took a prominent part in athletics at the Boston College High School, was elected manager and will arrange a schedule. James H. Maloney of Lawrence was chosen captain.

DIRECTORS FOR APOLLO A. C.

A new directorate governs the Apollo A. C., of Salem, for at a recent meeting the following were elected: Frank J. Brady, Frank J. Hopkins, Richard J. Flemming and Frank P. Quinlan. Dick Flemming will referee all boxing exhibitions. The next athletic entertainment will be held Monday night, September 27.

SCHOOL ATHLETIC NOTES.

The return of Hawley Gleason to the Dorchester High squad was pleasing to the students. No school team can afford to spare big line men this year. The Dorchester captain is 6 feet 1½ inches in height, and tips the scales at 190 pounds.

• • •

Football already has the residents of Waltham on edge. Two thousand people turned out to the Clinton game Saturday. The new bleachers were filled and for the first time in years organized cheering was tried with success.

• • •

Several of the athletes who graduated last June have not yet decided which college to enter. Football practice for the freshmen teams is now under

• • •

The hip injury to Sanford "Firehorse" Smith of the Waltham High team sustained in the Clinton game will keep that sterling player out of the game for ten days. Smith weighs 175 pounds and his presence in the line is needed.

• • •

The Beverly High candidates reported to Captain Cooney yesterday afternoon for the first practice. The team will again be coached by B. H. "Beat" Squires, the old Harvard tackle.

• • •

Van Etten and McNeil, two more veterans, reported to Coach O'Brien of the Boston Latin team. In the practice yesterday the players displayed more snap than has been seen in the Latin School camp for some years.

• • •

Captain Makepeace of the Hope Street High team of last season, and the best centre man seen around Boston last year, is a candidate for the Harvard freshman team. He is listed as a guard, but when Coach Waterbury discovers his qualities as a pivot man he will doubtless be shifted there.

• • •

Bob Garland, the promising halfback of the Somerville High team, who was injured in early practice in falling on the ball, may not play again this season. An X-ray examination was made yesterday and the physician found Garland's shoulder in bad shape.

• • •

Coach Fred J. O'Brien of the Boston Latin team appeared in togs yesterday and demonstrated how certain plays should be made. He rolled around in the dirt and kept the candidates working from the start to the finish. Few coaches put as much energy in their work.

• • •

The junior division of the Boston League is having trouble this year. Brighton High, West Roxbury High and Charlestown High are poorly represented and there may be no competition in the series.

The SUNDAY AMERICAN is the Seventh Day Wonder of New England.

DARTMOUTH HAS BIG SQUAD IN TRAINING

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 22.—Dartmouth's football squad saw another hard day. In the morning the centers and quarterbacks had a long drill. Dingle, the basketball player, was tried at centre in this practice and showed up well. He is quick and active and handles his 190 pounds well.

The afternoon practice saw Marks on the field and his presence added much to the speed of the back-field. After punting and falling on the ball, the line was sent in charge of Coaches Brusse and Keady to the bucking machine. After this a long signal drill followed. Coaches Lillard, Randall, Keady and Brusse were on the field.

The first team lined up as follows: Left end, Daley; left tackle, Sherwin; left guard, Tobin; centre, Dingle; right guard, Farnum; right tackle, Needham; right end, Bankart; quarter-back, Pishon; left half-back, Ingersoll; full-back, Marks; right half-back, Ryan.

The opposing team was made up strong principally in the line. McLean, Bissell, Battles, Swann and Meigs being some of the huskies used. The back field for the 'varsity was a good one, though the backs didn't have much of a chance to advance the ball, except by straight bucking. Woodie and Sawyer, both of whom are now with the 'varsity, were the half-backs, and Cunningham, a veteran, the full-back. Dawson played quarter-back. Johnny Poe, '97, joined the coaching squad to-day.

DUFFY SIGNS MILL PLAYERS

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Sept. 22.—The Mill League has ended the greatest season in its history, with Berkeley winning the pennant and the first prize of $150, Woonsocket got second money, $125, and the Heels nine of Uxbridge finished third and secured $100.

Rivard of the Berkeley team and Joyce of the Woonsockets have come to terms with Providence of the Eastern League, Drohan of the Woonsockets has signed with Worcester, and Frazer of Berkeley will go to Fall River. Maloney of the Berkeley team, who recently defeated Fred Metz of Athol in the 100-yard dash in the Scotch games at West Roxbury, has been interviewed by representatives of the Philadelphia Americans and Cincinnati Nationals. On the advice of both scouts he began to bat from the off side late in the season. He may be with a big league team next year. He is undoubtedly the fastest ground coverer in the national game.

COACHES WORRY OVER LACK OF GOOD CENTERS

Harvard coaches are alarmed over the lack of material for centre this year and according to Coach E. H. Greene, who is training the centre candidates, the situation is a serious one. "There will be a good deal of puzzling over this question before the season is over," said Coach Greene to an AMERICAN correspondent. "Unless some one of three varsity candidates develop more than I expect them to, the centre position will be the weakest link in the Crimson line this year."

The three men on the varsity squad who are competing for centre are Paul Withington, P. D. Smith and Foster. West, who tried for centre last year, has gone out for guard this year. Of the three applicants for centre, Paul Withington is the most likely candidate and Greene is devoting a large share of his time to the Honolulu boy to try and make him as near Nourse as possible.

Withington has had practically no experience in this position, his work in athletics hitherto having been confined mostly to crew work. Smith and Forster also are without experience in this position. There is some hope in the fact that Coach Greene was one of the best centres of the country when he was a member of Dave Campbell's team in 1901 and last year he succeeded in making a wonder out of Nourse.

Preliminary line bucking and breaking through were the features of the practice yesterday in preparation for the full-fledged scrimmages which will probably be held to-day.

Squad in Two Parts.

The Harvard squad is now divided into two parts. There are twenty-seven men on the first or varsity squad, as follows: Quarter backs, Gaitatti, O'Flaherty, Wigglesworth, Pierce; backs, Morris, Minot, Frothingham, Corbett, H. C. Leslie, F. H. Leslie; tackles, Fish, Fisher, McKay, Kennard; guards, Dunlay, Bush, Perkins, West; ends, Bob Brown, Gill Browne, Houston, Blanchard, L. Smith, Huntington; centers; P. D. Smith, Withington, Foster.

The coaches are trying to develop a good fighting and punting fullback out of Morrison, who seems to need but a little practice to put him in a class with Sprague and Minot in the kicking line. He has the speed, strength and head to make one of the Crimson's best line plungers.

Besides the question of centre, the coaches are worrying over several other matters. First of all is the eligibility of Kennard, which will probably be decided soon. Meanwhile Kennard is keeping in training and practice by acting as coach for the ends.

The result of their make-up examinations which McKay and Fisher take next week, will decide their football career this season. To add to this Minot is on the sick list and Sprague has been sent away for a long rest. He is all run down. Matters are not so serene at Harvard as the surface would indicate.

COLD FACTS

When it comes right down to brass tacks (by the way, there's a hammer that goes along with tacks—an instrument favored by the knockers' brigade of which Peary seems to be a disciple—for instead of finding the Pole frozen, he seems to have found it Cooked). Well, when it comes right down to cold facts in tailoring, there is plenty to hammer on. There's a vast difference between the ordinary $20, $30 and $35 clothes and the NEWMAN MADE kind—the classy clothes that skilled journeymen tailors produce at $20, that others find it difficult to duplicate at $30. HUG THE NECK and HAND-MADE, flexible, unbreakable coat fronts THAT WILL NOT CURL, hand-felled edges and hand-padded collars and lapels. In fact, NEWMAN-made clothes must be hand-made wherever hand work is necessary for perfecting a high-grade garment.

STRAIGHT DOPE

FOR SPORT FANS

FOLLOWERS OF THE WRESTLING game have a treat in store for them this week, when they have a chance to see a real live English champion at work. The real live English champion in this instance happens to be a native of County Galway, and that endears him to the heart of every loyal Irishman when he puts it on one of King Edward's subjects. The aforesaid champ is Pat Connelly, and he grapples with Jim Comstock tonight at the Columbia Theatre. Both are tough men, inclined to rough it up a little when occasion arises, and, being a man of peace myself, I'm going to take it in.

I HAVE A LETTER FROM YOUNG Sousa of Cambridge, the 105-pound national amateur champion, in which he bosses an open challenge to box any 105-pound boy in the country. The youngster says he is ready to enter the professional ranks and wants to get busy. A match between Sousa and Frank Mahoney, the little Boston sufferer, ought to make a good attraction for some good club. Mahoney is there some with the wallop himself and is willing to go on with any boy at anything under 110 pounds.

Straight Dope, Boston American:—

I see in your paper, Dr. BOSTON AMERICAN, that there are lots of challenges from sports desposed hereto. I would like to add my name to the list and get a little work. I sent in a challenge to Young Libyo, but have not heard from him yet. I will state here that I will meet Libyo in any club in or about the city for any reasonable amount. Libyo will take care of Coombes's little wife, and I will take care of Coombes's little wife should they can fight. I will take on any 95 or 100-pound boy in the world at no weight.

If you wish to know a little of my record, I fought a fast six-round draw with Sammy Fragne of Yonkers, N. Y., and won over Kid Bergen of New York in four rounds of a six-round mill. If you need a reply send it to Jimmy (Kid) Hayes, 227 Eim Street, Second floor, South Boston. I hope to hear from you as soon. I remain, respectfully, (Signed) JIMMY (KID) HAYES.

227 Eim Street, South Boston, Mass., U. S. A.
Mr. Ripley, manager.

The best way I know of for you to get on with some good boy is to call on Billy Pierce, matchmaker of the Armory Club, and get on his list, so he can use you when occasion arises. As far as boxing Kid Lippo is concerned, you should see Steve O'Donnell, the well-known boxing instructor, who has the Kid in charge and is making his engagements. O'Donnell can be found at his gymnasium at Washington and Concord streets.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Kindly inform me through your column who are the present world's champions of the bantamweight, welterweight and light heavyweight divisions. Thanking you in advance for the favor of a prompt reply, I am, yours truly,

J. D. CROZIER.

Concord square, Boston.

You're giving me a hard one. There are only thirteen claimants to the bantam championship, as nearly as I can figure them out, and each one can present claims to make his title look good. I refuse to go into the merits of those claims, but each of the boys will do so if you write to them. They are Johnny Coulon, Jimmy Walsh, Monte Attell, Joe Coster, Phil McGovern, Yankee Schwartz, Charlie Goldman, Patsy Brannigan, Joe Wagner, Al Delmont, Jimmy Reagan, Jimmy Carroll and Pal Moore.

So far as I can figure it out there are only four men who have legitimate claims to the welter title—Jimmy Gardner, Mike Twin Sullivan, Harry Lewis and Kyle Whitney. Here is the dope on them: Gardner beat Lewis, Mike Twin knocked out Gardner and Whitney held Mike Twin to a twenty-round draw.

I don't see any light heavy who is pining to get into the ring to contest with Sam Langford for the title, so I pass it along to Bill.

Boston, Sept. 20.

Straight Dope, Boston American:—

Dear Sir—I am manager of Jack Sloman. I would like to match my man against Longello, the West End Boxer 174 pounds. Willing to fight winner take all or any old way. Was his manager, see ft.

Would like to go on as a preliminary bout at the Armory A. A. NAT R. KRICK, North End Union, 20 Parmelee street, city.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir—The Tecon A. C. football team would like games for any dates during November, September 29, Oct. 13 (away from home ground Boston) and October 20. Address all game for the 25th to

LOUIS P. MARCHI, Captain,
19 Linwood square, Roxbury, Mass.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir—Kindly outline a football team is meeting this in the next issue of your great sport paper.

After making such a success of baseball the Trojan A. C. of Roxbury are now out to get 16 to 18-year-old boys to play football. The Trojans are known in football and would like to hear from all teams of that description. A

We especially desire games for Saturday, September 25, 29 and October 2.

EDWARD F. DOGAN,
5 King street, Boston, Mass.

Straight Dope, Boston American:

Dear Sir—The Gemauds, a local team have organized for the coming bowling season and are out for games with any club not to exceed 1500 pins. They had a very successful season and defeated each team in the city Club, Boston Home and the Institute. They closed the season with championship honors. All communications should be addressed to Mr. John McLaughlin, No. 504 Centre street, Roxbury, Boston, Sept. 23.

WINTHROP Y. C. AWARDS CUPS

The closing matinee of the season at the Winthrop Yacht Club was largely attended. The issue of raising the club dues, which was one of unusual interest to the members, was defeated by a large majority.

As a result of the declared necessity of increasing the revenue of the club, on the motion of Franklin Flint, a finance committee was appointed to consider what could be done toward straightening out the financial tangle.

At the close of the meeting the winners of the various cups for percentage during the past yachting season were presented. The Commodore's cup and the Byrnes cup went to C. L. Joy, owner of the Kit, for percentage in the twenty-foot class. In the eighteen-foot class the King cup was presented to H. S. Bloomfield, owner of the Answer. L. E. King, owner of Pete, received the Vice-Commodore's cup for power boats, with the Secretary's cup in the same class going to the Hello Bill. R. S. Gourley's Marion received the Treasurer's cup. For the best decorated boat in the closing run of the season Z. M. Stevens, owner of the Eva D., was awarded the special cup.

KELLEHER AT TUFTS.

Cy Kelleher, the former Cambridge Latin and English High School player, is a candidate for the Tufts College varsity eleven and looks good for one of the halfback positions.

FIELDER JONES PICKS DETROIT

PORTLAND, Ore., Sept. 22.—Fielder Jones, ex-manager of the Chicago White Sox, picks Detroit to win the American League pennant race. He says: "I think the race will depend on the series between Philadelphia and the White Sox at Philadelphia September 29, 30 and October 1.

"I figure that New York, Washington and Boston will take four out of twelve from Detroit and that Philadelphia will just about clean up its series with Cleveland and St. Louis. That will give it the edge then, so if it beats Chicago it will win out.

NATIONAL A. C. TO OPEN NEXT MONDAY

The National A. C. will open its new quarters in South Boston next Monday with a six-round bout between Mike Matis and Young Conley of South Boston, and Bert Delaney of Northboro and Young Wood of Cambridge in the semi-final bout of eight rounds. The final bout of the evening will be of ten rounds, between Tommy Casey of New York and Willie Riley of South Boston.

BOSTON AMERICANS DOUBLE

The Love Cure--By Dorothy Dix

This is the first of three articles written by Dorothy Dix under the heading, "The Love Cure." One dealing with men and a third with women will appear on this page. Watch for them.

WHY is it that this country, where the marriage for money, or position, and the marriage of convenience are practically unknown, should lead the world in its number of divorces?

Inasmuch as they have no sordid, material ends to gain by marrying the people they do, it is indispensable that almost all Americans marry for love. This being the case, America should be a model moral citizen, with every home an abode of peace, sheltering two souls with but a single thought and that thought each one's devotion to the other.

This is far enough from being the case. Ideal homes in our midst are scarcer than white marble palaces, and the husband and wife, who, after ten years of matrimony, are still genuinely spoony are rare enough to be marked individuals in the community.

This suggests a very interesting question: Why is it that people who marry for love so soon cease to be in love with each other? What is the deadly, blighting thing in matrimony that works the love cure?

The Transformations

Oh, it is there. There is no use in denying it. Don't we see men who are breaking their necks to get a girl, a year after they marry her running their legs off to get away from her?

Don't we see men who, before marriage, were all tenderness and gallantry and devotion, a few months after marriage speak to their wives in a tone of voice and treat her with a lack of consideration that they would not dare to show to any servant, who could give notice and quit?

Don't we see a girl's heart been loaded down with presents, and escort her to the theatre and the opera every night in the week and don't we see the same man after marriage haggling with her over coffee, and telling her that she's got no business running around and a woman's place is her home?

And don't we see women who were pretty, dainty, bright, vivacious girls before marriage turn into dowdy, cross, whining, nagging scolds after marriage? Don't we see women who worked themselves to death to please their sweethearts utterly indifferent as to whether they please their husbands or not? Don't we see women who before marriage set at a man's feet and quoted him as an oracle after marriage loosing him out of his life and contradicting him every time he spoke?

Why Should This Be?

Why, verily, all of these domestic phenomena are matter of common observation, and the cause worries people amongst us. We know that they are signs of storms and cyclones, and thunder and lightning, and a rain of tears.

And yet why should this be thus? Those men and women did not deliberately marry each other with the set purpose of making the party of the other part miserable, nor with any full intent of blighting love's young dream.

On the contrary, John expected to make Mary happy, and Mary hadn't a doubt that she was going to make matrimony one glad, sweet song for John, and both of them never doubted that their love would last as long as life itself. Otherwise it would have been celebacy for theirs.

But it didn't last. There came a day, after the calls and fever of courtship were over, when they sadly faced the fact that their pulses no longer thrilled to each other's footfalls, and their blood ran cold and steady, and there wasn't a single palpitation left in their systems. Something, undefined, unforeseen, unsought, had wrought a love cure. Why?

Satisfy the Explanation

Perhaps the most obvious explanation is satiety. As human nature is constituted, it is impossible for two people to live together continually without growing tired of each other.

You cannot sit opposite to the same person every morning at breakfast for three hundred and sixty-five days in your life, eat his or her society pelling upon you, any more than you could eat the same sort of breakfast food every day without getting a disgust for it.

Nor can you be thrillingly interested in the conversation of a person whose every joke and anecdote you have heard until you feel as if you will scream every time he or she starts out on the repetition of the stale tale.

Likewise, when you are forced to look at the same thing, day after day, month after month, and year after year, it grows on monotonous and wears on you that you see in it only blemishes and no charms.

This is why husbands and wives, in time, lose sight of all of each other's virtues and perceive only each other's faults and weaknesses. It is also why, after a husband or wife is removed be death, the surviving one is able to go back to the love of his or her youth and really mourn the dear departed with sincere grief.

No Romance in the Home

I once heard a sentimental old married man say that it was the regret of his life that he had to march into his own house in the broad light of day through the open front door instead of singing a love song under his wife's window in the moonlight and climbing up to her window by a rose ladder at the risk of his life.

There is a deal of truth in this fanciful speech. When a man sees his wife take the rats out of her hair, and wash the roses off her cheek, and exchange her pink chiffons for a dingy wrapper, he kisses romance goodby. She has disillusioned him, and--God knows why--some how a man's love can't live without illusions. A woman's can, sometimes, but not a man's.

Yet how are illusions to be maintained in the average household where a family is crowded into such a small space that even privacy is impossible, and where the wife must be cook and housemaid, and nurse, and seamstress, and heaven knows what, and give her mind to frying potatoes and darning socks instead of veiling herself in mystery?

It is like telling a starving pauper that he should take good care of his furniture. Yet, the disenchantment of matrimony is a part, and a big part, of the love cure.

The Safety Kiss---Guaranteed Innocuous

Practicing the Safety Kiss

What flavor will you have with your kiss?

It is not impossible to get which ever flavor--or more properly, scent--you wish, thanks to the ingenuity of a German, Herr Hermann Sommer. And not only do you get a scented kiss, when the osculatory process is performed according to his prescription, but you get an absolutely hygienic kiss.

The germless kiss was the object of Herr Sommer when he designed the appliance, but the unscientific public was won by the possibility of giving scented kisses even more than by hygienic considerations. Roses, cloves and peppermint are the flavors so far most popular, but the odors of many delightful flowers are also used.

Herr Sommer's invention is simply a pretty miniature tennis racquet, with a glistening frame and a fine silk gauze stretched across it. This gauze is held across the mouth while the kiss is given. The lips never actually meet, but it is said the thrill is just as keen as ever.

Whether America will take kindly to innocuous kissing or not remains to be seen.

Good-by, Sweet Summer

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THE Summer has slid into the past with all the rest of the golden Summers, and what has it done for you, little sister? Can you look back on it as a fragrant, sweet memory, or was it a page of your life that you never wish to turn to again? I know how it is; some Summers are so happy that you cling to each flying minute, crying "Dear Summer, do stay your hurrying feet; I am so happy; tarry for my sake; grant me just a little longer of your sweetness and my joy." And Summer shakes her golden-tressed head, "Ah, no, my time is spent, I am glad if I have brought you joy; trespass it, that it may spread out into life's Autumn and Winter, and in my case, even should it fly, you have its sweet memory."

But youth does not want memories. It wants joy's living, breathing presence, and to push joy means love.

Perhaps the past Summer has brought you a great love and content. If so, dear little girls, take care of it and keep it pure and holy.

Love will not stay unless it is treated as an honored guest. You know it dies, oh, so easily; a little neglect, a little unkindness and he lies at your feet a broken butterfly.

Sometimes the people who seem to treat love most indifferently hold it the long est. But their indifference is only to our unseeing eyes; between them and love there must be some sweet communion which holds them fast together.

Unscrupulous Men

What sort of men have you met this Summer? Have they been real men, the sort of men whom it does a girl good to know, or have they been the sort whose acquaintance you could well have left unmade?

I mean the kind who have no reverence for your youth and goodness, and have tried to take advantage of them.

There are men who are always ready to urge a girl to drink intoxicants and to do things for which her reputation cannot help but suffer.

If there are any of that kind among your Summer acquaintances drop them before it is too late.

We all make many acquaintances during our outings whom we never meet again; we are just "ships that pass in the night."

But if we carry the acquaintance into the Winter it becomes closer; and I want you to weed your undesirable friendships.

If a heartache is the aftermath of your Summer, try and bear it patiently and make up your mind to rise above it. There are men who look upon the breaking of a girl's heart as a Summer pastime.

But a girl's heart is made of too good material to be thrown away as a man's plaything; so you must not give way to the pain that seems almost too unbearable at times. Try and remember that the man who deliberately causes a woman to suffer is not worth the suffering.

Some place in the world your mate is looking and waiting for you, and when he comes all other men, past and present, will seem as nothing beside him.

So mend your broken heart, dear. After all, it may only be damaged--not seriously hurt.

Keep it good and pure and sweet, so that when the king comes to his own he may find it at all abiding place wherein to place his entire love and trust.

And now it is time for all little brown-faced Summer girls to hang out the rosy-cheeked flag of health and prepare for a Winter of health and happiness.

Some Hints for the Early Autumn Days

By WINIFRED BLACK

B-R-R-R!

Kind of a chill in the air this morning, isn't there?

Have you noticed the sunshine--how yellow it is?

As yellow as the maple leaves that flutter down on the green grass by the window this morning.

As yellow as potted honey; as yellow as a clot of amber--Fall sunshine--the sunshine that means get your Winter clothes ready; you'll need them in a week or two when I've run away into the back forest to hide till next Spring comes again."

Where's that little half-weight jacket that came in so handy this Spring? Has your coat come home from the tailor's yet --b-r-r, how chilly that straw hat looks!

Did you notice the little woman next door in her brown dress with the tan hat that was so smart a week ago--dear me, she looked poverty-stricken, didn't she?

What did you have for breakfast--meaning and grounded, of course? What kind of a breakfast is that in Fall?

Hot biscuits and honey are what you really need, or some little, brown, home-made sausages, all buttoned up in their crisp little jackets, with plenty of sage for a dressing and a plate of brown potatoes, the kind that Aunt Mandy used to make when you had the headache and couldn't get up in time to go to school, but began to feel better and a little hungry just about a quarter past nine.

Tenderloins are good, too--pork tenderloins, with plenty of gravy and some cream and peas to go with them--um, aren't you glad you don't belong to a dieting club?

What cold comfort those breakfast foods look on a Fall morning like this, don't they?

Hurrah! It's Fall! Let's go downtown and order the meat for the sausages and the grapes for the jelly and the pumpkins for the pies.

What--are those Hubbard squashes ever there in the corner of the market? Let's have them ourselves, one of those squashes into four comfortable pieces, put them in a pan and roast them in a slow oven--ever so slow, and with a little butter and lots of pepper and salt--and, dear me, what a farce these Summer dinners we've been having were, after all!

Fall's here--with the open fire and the long evenings in the dancing firelight--the grapes for the jelly and the pumpkins for the pies.

What--are those Hubbard squashes ever there in the corner of the market? Let's have them ourselves, one of those squashes into four comfortable pieces, put them in a pan and roast them in a slow oven--ever so slow, and with a little butter and lots of pepper and salt--and, dear me, what a farce these Summer dinners we've been having were, after all!

Fall's here--with the open fire and the long evenings in the dancing firelight--the evenings that seem so much to friendship and to family life.

We'll get acquainted with each other all over again. Won't we, sitting there in the glow of the friendly fingers? And the book we haven't had time to read all Summer, and the letters it was too hot to write, and the children who wouldn't come into the house till bedtime--we'll gather them all around us again, for it's heart time, home time, fire time, Fall time. Hurrah for Fall!

The Education of Juanita Smith

By Kennett Harris

"I BLIEVE in lettin' a gal learn as much as she's a mind to," declared old Man Somerindyck, as he rolled a pipe load of whittled plug between his horny palms. "Up to a certain p'int schoolin' good for 'em, but beyond that it makes 'em beastly an' bossy. Look at that school ma'am that was in here the other day after that there new-fangled flour."

"She hain't the kind I keer pertickler

"She knows too much," said Bill Tribbs."

about lookin' at," said the storekeeper, grinning.

"Wow you wouldn't," grumbled the old Man, "how nobuddy else wouldn't. Think of havin' a face like that op'sit you at table three times a day. No, sir-ee, Bob, I claim that when they know readin', writin', elpherin', gography, grammar, history, an' cookin' an' plain sewin', they know about as much as Godsmity needs. They should know, an' I've seed a right smart of 'em get along tol'able well an' rales hard families with just the cookin' an' plain sewin'."

"What-all do you reckon a man needs to know?" asked Sol Baker.

"Anythin' he dern pleases," replied the sage. "He don't need to know nothin' if he won't want to. Cose he wants to know enough to make a livin', but he don't have to 'ten school to learn that. Put a hoe in his fist an' stir him up behind with a goad an' he'll come out all right. Same time, if a feller takes a notion he wants to be a lawyer, or a preacher or a doctor, school, so he sent her off to a boardin' school in St. Joe an' kep' her there two years studyin' every mortial thing that there was to study, an' when she got back she could blindfold her--I an' the gal are blind her back an' then stump anybody in the county on general knowledge. She never made any brags about it herse'f, but Ol' Dominie Holmes told me who was away beyond him, an' he knew Latin an' Greek as well as I do United States, an' he could put a reaper together better'n the man who made it. Then Carlos B. did some tall talkin' about what his daughter had learned an' what it cost him to get her teached.

"Now, here's how it goes: Whenst Juanita went away to school she was about seventeen, an' as cute an' purty as a spotted pup. She had sparkle to her eyes an' dimples an' roses to her cheeks an' more dimples in her elbers, there was snap in her action an' ginger an' honey in her talk--ordin' you can't tell what you do. Must ghi'rally a wife o' ginger, though, whether or no. Well, that gal and about every loose feller within forty miles right foolish about her an' there was more'n one that was tied tight as a tow rope that wished they wasn't when Juanita went agast.

"Carlos B.'s picket fence had more hosses hitched to it every evenin' than the most he' house hitch rail. She could have took her pick o' the best of 'em right then, an', for that matter, she did. Bill Tribbs was the feller that she was most took with, seemed like. Bill was a right clever boy good lookin' an' tol'able well fixed; right smart of a ladies' man, Bill was, an' he sorter flattered from flower to flower afore he met up with Juanita. The neighbors about had it settled that Bill an' Juanita was goin' to get married when Carlos B. got her off to st. Joe.

"Two years later she came back. The hull township was down to the depot to see her come in, an' what d'ye reckon she looked like whenst she stepped off the train? Well, I'll tell ye. If she was purty afore, she were ravishin' now, an' she was right purty then. She was so purty, b'jucks, you'd gramn when you seed her like you was suckin' a axe into a log. That even

Steve married her and prospered.

'I ain't got nothin' agin her,' he says. 'She's a right nice gal an' powerful pert, but daggone my cats! she knows a heap too much for me. She ain't lettin' on, but seems like there hain't nothin' that she don't know 'ceptin' housework, an' what kind of a wife ud that be for a man to have? She'd be forever more settin' up her eyrinyun agin mine, an' what's more, she'd probly prove that she was right an' I was wrong about it. I don't want no woman that'll make me feel like a fool.'

"I don't blame him," commented the storekeeper.

"I don't see how you're a-goin' to get around it if you marry any kind of a woman at all," opined Baker.

"Whether or no, that resolved to be the way all the boys felt," said Hancock. "They all kep' away an' it was nigh on to a year before Steve Gammett came over from Atchison an' fell in love with Juanita an' married her. He owned up that he was as ignerant as a brindle mewl right from the start. But he had mewl sense, an' that's a heap better'n book sense, I want to tell you, an' in less'n five years after they was married, he was chairman o' the board o' county supervisers an' o' the county democratic central committee, vice-president of the Drovers' National Bank, sublimated hierarch of the Royal an' Imperial Goggiers, deacon in the church an' judge of the twelfth events at the county fair, an' if ever you ust steve to go anythin' special or to give his eyrinyun about anythin' out o' the way, he only one answer:

"'I reckon I'll have to talk that over with my wife.'"

"What became o' Bill Tribbs?" asked Eben Baxter.

"Jest what you'd nachally s'pose," answered Hancock. "Nothin' become of him an' nothin' ever will. He's jest the same old Bill."

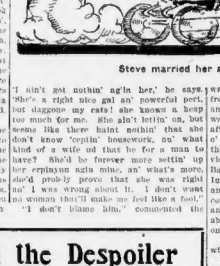
Predestination, the Pole and the Despoiler

By JAMES J. MONTAGUE

WHEN, as Creation's morning broke, the continents divided,
When thinned the crater-wreathing smoke and boiling sea subsided,
King Frost roofed in the northern tide and set his berms to bound it,
While glacier barriers, far and wide, and strongly ranged around it,
And then he marked it, clear and plain,
"Commander Peary, Portland, Maine."

Commander Peary, being born, laid claim to this possession,
And other men were prompt to warn against undue aggression.
And presently he sailed forth with dogs and natives, yearly,
To find his own predestined North, and often did it--nearly.
But Boreas is not lightly tamed,
And still the Pole remained unclaimed.



At last, before his gladdened eye, the Pole loomed, faint and hoary,
And fearing some one else might try to share his Pole and glory,
He ordered his companions back, despite their tears and pleading,
Their looks of woe and scowls of black, unfeelingly, unheedingly.
"That Pole is mine!" he grimly cried.
"Don't ever think that I'll divide!"

When he kept looking all around, but always looked to south'ard,
His pulses high, triumphant bound, heroically he smothered.
And then he smothered it some more; he sought to find his name on
The ocean-driven Arctic floor, the which to base his claim on.
But everywhere he chanced to look
The only name he saw was "Cook."

Some men steal gold and some steal trash; some men steal reputations,
Some pilfer bread, and some take cash; Napoleon stole nations.
But in this case, although the Pole was by preordination
Apportioned off for Peary's sole and single occupation,
Came Cook, the catiff wight, and stole
Commander Peary's private Pole.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

TIT FOR TAT.

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

Am nineteen years of age and am acquainted with a young man for about a year, who is three years my senior.

He has often called to see me and has taken me to many places of amusement and treated me nicely.

I once disappointed him, and he seemed to be offended, as he has not call ed since then.

While walking the other night I met him, and he walked on with me and asked me whether I had any appointment for the next evening, and I said no. He asked if he could call, and I said yes. Then he said: "I suppose you'll be home like the last time," and I told him I positively would be home, and yet he wouldn't take my word for it. Everything I said he thought I was fooling, and he said I'm not serious about it. He did not call, after all.

Please tell me how I could make him believe I am in earnest, as I care for the young man very much and I think he cares for me, but he thinks somebody else calls on me. N. C. S.

HE evidently considered that he was paying you back for not having kept the former engagement with him. It was not a very kind nor gentlemanly thing to do, however, and if I were you I would be slow to make any more engagements with him. Tell him that you will be glad to see him any time he comes, but that you think it wise to make no more appointments, which neither side seems bound to keep.

BETTER BE HONEST ABOUT IT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am eighteen years of age and have been going with a young man, one year my senior, for the past two years. He has no prospects of getting married for at least four years.

I am employed by a stenographer in an insurance office, and there is an agent of twenty-five years who has professed his love for me, and wants me to get engaged to him for two months, at the end of which time he wants to get married.

My people have met both young men, but they do not think the second young man's intentions are on serious.

Now, what I want to know is, should I let the second young man speak to my father about the matter, and could I tell my first sweetheart about it. I know he will feel terribly about the matter, as I have not spoken out with any one but him for the past two years, and when he told me he loved me I told him his love was reciprocated. NANCE.

I THINK you ought to marry the one you like best, but in any case you ought to be honest about it and settle one way or the other. If you do not care for your former sweetheart you should tell him so; it is not fair to him to allow him to think you care, if you do not. The game of keeping two young men on the string is a dangerous one.

You see the AMERICAN everywhere--in the homes, clubs, restaurants, hotels, cars and boats.

A HUSBAND'S AUTUMN PLAINT

By CHESTER FIRKINS.

I READ the loveliest poem,
At twilight yesterday,
And married at the wondrous things
That poet-folk can say.
It likened lovely woman
Unto a summer tree,
That blossoms out, each Springtime gay,
With freshest finery.
Both shade the earth i'um questing
With parasols of green,
And take their trunks along with them
To some fair woodland scene.
Sweet thought! but would that woman
Were like a Winter tree,
Instead of routing up each Fall
New bills for finery!

A MISUNDERSTANDING

THE guest came down to breakfast sleepy and subdued, but the hotel proprietor cheerfully queried:

"Did you enjoy the flute-playing in the room next to you last night?"

"Enjoy it? I spent half the night pounding on the wall for the idiot to stop!"

"Goodness! Why, Herr Wiffler told me he'd be obliged over all the times that the four times became the person in the next room renewed every one!"

BETROTHAL OF YOUNG BLAINE AND MISS DOW IS EVENT OF SOCIETY

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

There is a delightful ripple of excitement in society above the announcement yesterday of the engagement of that popular and pretty little debutante, Marion Dow, to the distinguished young Harvard man, James G. Blaine, 2d, son of James G. Blaine, Jr., and grandson of James G. Blaine.

Miss Dow, who is an airy-fairy little miss, still in her teens, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Richard F. Dow of Chilton street and Marion. She is now with her parents at their Summer home in Marion, where Mr. Blaine has been visiting for several weeks past. Both are extremely fond of outdoor sports and have been spending their days playing tennis and golf or riding and driving.

Mr. Blaine's mother is the widow of the famous surgeon, William T. Bull, who died a few months ago. Mr. Blaine is now with his mother at her summer home in Newport. He is in his twenty-first year and is a junior at Harvard, so of course there are no definite plans for the wedding.

* * *

Mrs. Thomas Bailey Aldrich, with her son and daughter-in-law, Major and Mrs. Talbot Aldrich, are among those who have recently returned from Europe. They spent the Summer motoring through Great Britain and on the Continent.

* * *

The hunting set is looking anxiously forward to the hunt breakfast which S. Darcy Bush, president of the Myopia Hunt Club, is to give at his home in Hamilton October 26, when the regular two-horse runs will begin.

On Friday the drag hounds of the Myopia hunt will meet at 6:30 a. m. at Great Oak, Asbury Grove.

* * *

General and Mrs. Stephen M. Weld, who closed their Dedham home last week and sailed for Europe, are to pass the greater part of their time while abroad in Ireland. The Welds have arranged an automobile trip, and in addition are to do some cruising.

* * *

Mrs. Philip Snowden of England is to be entertained during her stay here by Mrs. George Perry Morris of Brookline. Mrs. Snowden is the wife of a member of the English Parliament, and although she is an ardent advocate of woman suffrage and is devoting her life to the cause, her husband is her most loyal supporter. Mrs. Snowden is unquestionably the most attractive English woman that has ever been here in the interest of woman suffrage. Philip Snowden, M. P., is about forty-five and his talented young wife is not yet thirty, but in spite of the difference in their ages, their life is quite ideal, as they have the same mind on many of the most significant matters of life.

Mrs. Morris has invited Mrs. Snowden to come here for a visit of at least a week before her lecture engagements begin so that she may have a little time to enter into the social life here.

Popular Songs

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

I.

IN far away Dakota, where my youth was spent in vain,
A newly married couple rode upon a monoplane;
The wife was young and pretty, with a dimple in her chin,
The husband was a prune old man, with features lank and thin
They sailed above a fifty two miles up in the air;
The lady gazed a moment on her husband sitting there,
And as she teased him from the deck that bright October day,
These words, mixed up with commas, she ferociously did say:

Chorus:

"A married man is ballast, that is all,
And ballast was invented for to fall,
So I tipped you into space,
May you light upon your face,
A married man is ballast, that is all!"

II.

Long years have flown since that sad day, and now that woman knows
That folks aside from husbands sometimes have their overthrows.
The husband whom she murdered was a hero tried and true,
For he looked her in the face the day he came to woo.
She never got another chance another man to wed,
And now she thinks about the day he lit upon his head.
She sits in her apartment with her locks all thin and gray
And thinks about them cruel words which she to him did say:

Chorus:

"A married man is ballast, that is all," etc.

MRS. RANCE gave him a withering glance from her black eyes. And I know what her thoughts were as well as though she had spoken them out. She felt that she hated Rouletabille, who had for a single moment been able to make her suspect old Rob. While Burley had been assaulted, had not the latter been quietly in his chamber, watched over by Mere Bernier herself?

Rouletabille was examining the iron bars and heavy lid which closed the shaft, but his manner was distrait and discouraged. After he had finished what seemed to be a very careless inspection he stretched himself out on the ground as if it were a couch in which he was trying to get some rest. Turning once more to his hostess, he said in the same low voice:

"And what will you tell the police when they get here?"

"Everything!"

Mrs. Rance fairly snapped out the word between her teeth, her eyes flashing menacingly. Rouletabille shook his head sorrowfully and said in a low voice: "Be careful! Be careful! Remember that you are in the Castle—all the dependencies of the fort from which no one could be made to escape, and where, therefore, the assassin must still be concealed. The reporter shook his head dreadfully and said that it would be of no use. Rouletabille and I agree only too well that any search would be in vain. Had we not made a search at the Glandier after the phenomenon of the dissolution of matter, for the man we had unexpectedly in the inexplicable gallery? Yes, no! I had learned that there was no use in looking for Larsan with one's eyes.

A man had been murdered just behind our backs. We had heard him cry out when the blow struck him down. We had turned around and had seen nothing except the daylight. To see clearly, it was better to close the eyes as Rouletabille was doing at this moment.

And when he opened them, he was another man! A new energy animated his features. He stood erect as though he had thrown off a weight. He clenched his fist and raised it toward the heavy eyes.

"That is not possible!" he cried. "Or there is no more good in reasoning."

And he threw himself on the ground, creeping on his hands and knees, his nose to the earth, like a hound following the scent, going round the body of poor Bernier, and around Mere Bernier, who had blankly refused to leave her husband's side, around the shaft—around each of us. He moved about like a pig, nosing in the inhuman dirt of the mire, and we all stood still, looking at him curiously and half in alarm. Suddenly he started to his feet, almost white with excitement, uttered a shout of triumph as though he had found Larsan himself in the grave. What new victory did the boy feel that he had achieved over the mystery? What had given this new keenness to his step and steadiness to his glance? What had given back to him the strength of his voice? For when he addressed M. Robert Darzac his tones were full of vigor and resolution.

"It's all right, Monsieur! Nothing is changed!"

And, turning to Mme. Edith—

"There is nothing more to do, Madame, except to wait for the police. I hope that they will not be long."

The unhappy woman shuddered. I knew that she was again struck with mortal fear.

"Yes, let them come," she cried, taking my arm. "And let them attend to everything. Let them think for us! Whatever may happen, be it ever so soon as it will," she attracted by the sound of voices we looked around and saw Père Jacques approaching, followed by two gendarmes. It was Rouletabille who, when the sun had mounted to Prince Galitch, had hurried to the farm of the elder.

"The gendarmes! the gendarmes!" Père Jacques was crying. "I have been quick, eh? claimed Père Jacques, who as yet knew nothing of what had happened.

"Be calm, Père Jacques!" exhorted Rouletabille; and when the old man, panting and breathless, drew near to the reporter, the latter said to him in low tones:

"Nothing is changed, Père Jacques."

But Père Jacques was gazing at Bernier's body.

"Only one more dead man!" he sighed. "This is Larsan's work again!"

"It is the work of destiny!" answered Rouletabille.

Larsan and destiny—both were as one. But what did Rouletabille mean by all "Nothing is changed," if not that, despite the accidental murder of Bernier, everything which we dreaded, which made us shudder and which we had to do understanding of, continued as before?

The gendarmes were busy examining the body and chattering over it in their incomprehensible jargon. The brigadier informed us that they had first planned to the Garibaldi Tavern, a few steps away, where at this moment the delegate, or special commissioner, stationed at Villeville, was even now breakfasting. The delegate would have power to begin the investigation, which would be continued when the examining magistrate had been notified.

The delegate arrived. It was easily to be seen that he was enchanted, even though he had not had the time to finish his repast. A crime! actually a crime! And in the shadow of Hercules. He was fairly radiant; his eyes shone. He was full of business, full of importance. He ordered the brigadier to station one of his men at the gate of the chateau with directions to permit no person to pass in or out. Then he knelt down beside the body while a gendarme, despite her protestations and tears, led Mere Bernier away to the Square Tower, where her groans sounded louder than ever. The delegate examined the wound and said in very good French:

"That was a magnificent stroke!"

TO GAIN WEIGHT

Will you tell me what to do to get plump and increase my weight a few pounds? I am 22 years of age, five feet four inches tall, and weigh 120 pounds. I should be very glad if you will tell me how to gain about 15 pounds. I am working in an office every day.

MARION K.

Directions for increasing the weight have been issued here so often in reply to others' inquiries that some may frown at a question.

You may increase your weight by eating nourishing food, using plenty of butter, olive oil, cream and milk. Avoid all kinds of worry, take time for eating, and then rest long thoroughly. Drink plenty of ordinary tepid water with meals, for this is an exclusive myth dirt. Drinking water does not fatten starts a dog.

I have a number of people tell me that a certain patent called sarge does wonders in putting on flesh, and that as a test the Sarge Co. (Regal Building, Binghamton, N. Y.) will send 1 box, package free to any one mailing them a postal card. Possibly you should write them. Perhaps some of those who have tried it would be glad to tell you their experience. Cholesterin Compound is a new drug, and it is said to build several gallons of milk. It seems remarkable, as we all know there are foods so concentrated that an ounce or so a day is ordered for a sober or a long march.

I hope you will be able to write me in a short time that my advice has helped you gain the desired weight, for there is nothing more unbecoming than to be skinny and underweight.

EDUCATION 25 YEARS BEHIND PUBLIC NEED, J. P. MUNROE'S IDEA

The remarkable utterances of James P. Munroe, one of Boston's most earnest workers in behalf of education, that the schools of this city were years behind the times, has called forth widespread interest and discussion. On this point it should be explained that there has been a misunderstanding as to just what Mr. Munroe believes about this line.

He is convinced that education in general is nearly two years behind the needs of the times. That is, that educators have not been able to keep abreast of the march of progress for twenty-five years.

Mr. Munroe also believes that there should be smaller classes in the Boston schools and that the teachers should have better preparation than that afforded them by the public and normal schools.

A serious drawback to progress in our public schools, Mr. Munroe points out, is the lack of interest and backing by the public. In fact particular the schools of the Middle West are far ahead of us, he declares. Mr. Munroe explains that if efficiency that is engendered in various ways were properly developed there would be sufficient to make the Boston schools the best in the country. He explains this in the following communication:

25 Years Behind Needs.

Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

I am glad to avail myself of the opportunity given by your courteous letter and by Dr. Sommerlis kind reference to me in a recent interview to try to set myself right upon a few important points concerning the public schools.

First, I do not believe, of course, that the schools of Boston are twenty-five years behind the times. On the contrary, I am convinced and have frequently asserted that the present administration of affairs in all that it pos sibly can with the comparatively limited funds at its command. What I do maintain is that public education in general is twenty-five years behind the needs of the times. Social and industrial progress has been so rapid in the last thirty years that the schools, partly from failure to appreciate the change, partly from conservatism, but mainly from lack of moral and financial support from the community, have been unable to keep up.

Secondly, I do not in the least believe that the teachers of Boston, rude or feeble, are incompetent. What I do maintain is that we cannot get the kind of training which every child ought to have until all teachers are thoroughly educated and trained, until they have smaller classes to deal with, until they have a more direct share in the guidance of education, and until, as a body, they have the professional pride and zeal for themselves the professional standards of medicine, law and engineering. These things cannot be secured, however, until the rewards of good teaching are larger and more assured. Convinced, furthermore, that breadth of experience is essential to good teaching, I see great danger in recruiting the staff of a city entirely or wholly, or even largely, from men and women who have graduated and then gained as pupils in the public and normal schools of that same city.

Public Is Indifferent.

Finally, I believe and have stated over and over again that the well-recognized deficiencies in all public schools are largely due, not to shortcomings on the part of the teachers, but to the indifference of the public.

As a rule the public will not try to understand exceptional weakness, will not back up needed school reforms, will not do their proper share, as principle and conscience, in educating the rising generation, and above all, will not appreciate that good, thorough education is the most economical expenditure to provide healthful conditions, to train children to be what they should be, to be taught by each teacher, and really to educate every child in those directions about which he is most likely to succeed. As a result the schools of the Middle West are ahead of us. It is due, in a large degree, to the lack of hearty support of their schools by the people of those cities and towns.

This failure of the public to its responsibilities is a work in which for many years I have been trying, as a citizen and business man, to take some part and I am convinced that the school committee and the teachers of Boston regard of many more than I am, so much correctness and self sacrifice, that are now accomplishing, until the people of Boston place their city upon a basis of business economy and make reforms in their antiquated methods of taxation. The money now squandered or lost to the city would then be available for the schools and would place them where they ought to be, at the forefront of efficiency. To secure that added support and to enable the school authorities to make effective the citizens and especially the parents, must take the trouble to understand what modern education is trying to do and must add to and help their schools in every way. For these schools are the main foundation of the city's moral and industrial life. Very sincerely yours, JAMES P. MUNROE.

Notes of the Arrival

By WEX JONES

SYDNEY—Seated on a pile of fishing nets in the cabin of his ship, Peary today gave the world the story of his successful quest. The Roosevelt, laden with walrus hides, floated in the little harbor like a fly in a glass of butterscotch.

"I have several cases of observations," said Peary, "but I shall not make them public until I see Cook's. Then I shall prove that his are wrong. Further I can not say at this time."

Other members of the expedition talked freely. "Ah, forget it," said Captain Bartlett, the master of the Roosevelt.

"Throw it," said one of the scientists.

"Put it out," was the substance of another's remarks.

One of the Arctic foxes aboard the Roosevelt is so tame that it makes no effort to escape from the wire cage in which it is confined.

Other notes of the trip, as furnished by members of the expedition, were:

Blubber is an oily taste.

The Pole looks like a 10-cent piece of ice on a Harlem dumbwaiter.

Polar bears are not called from their capacity to climb poles.

The Eskimos have made no preparations to celebrate the Hudson-Fulton anniversaries.

Walrus object to parting with their tusks.

Battle Harbor has no good theatres.

Reaching the Pole is simple enough. All one has to do is point one's nose north and keep following it.

* * *

London—The Zetetic Society here announces both Cook and Peary as impostors. Since the earth is flat, says the society, there can be no such thing as a North Pole. This view is also accepted in Scotland, where it is held that if such a thing as an unappropriated North Pole exists some gentleman would have long ago discovered it.

Oshkosh—A resolution was passed by the Society of Exiled Daughters congratulating the race on the discovery of the Pole. Now, it was pointed out, the Eskimos would no longer be compelled through politeness to acquire large quantities of Indigestible and nauseating quadrupeds proffered by well-meaning explorers.

Up-to-Date Jokes

"What one wave of my wand," says the fairy, "I can make you grow young again."

"Excuse me," replied the woman. "If I decide to accept your offer I can bring youth to me at my present age, all right, but I positively refuse to travel back through geology, the ice age, the stone age of bridge, the bath tub, the straight front, bullion sleeves and all the rest of the fads I can remember."

Weary Wife—No, the vicar is not in just now. Is there any message you would like me to give him when he returns?

Caller—Only my compliments, madam. Martha Higgins would like to be buried at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon.

"For goodness' sake, Harry, why so sad?"

"The cook's left, but that isn't the worst of it; she took with her the recipe-book for all the things John's ever used to make."

"Judge, did you ever try an absinthe frappe?"

"No; but I've tried a lot of fellows who have."

TODAY'S STOCK MARKETS; FINANCIAL NEWS

NORTH BUTTE LEADS COPPERS

STATE STREET, Sept. 22—North Butte stood out alone in a weak market for copper shares this forenoon and rose 2½ points to 61 on buying by Paine. In the early forenoon traders worked for a reaction and in a measure accomplished this, although the market was dull and narrow.

Large sales of copper are being negotiated for, although the price will not be far from the present level.

According to T. W. Lawson, the new copper combine, over which some talk has been made, will consist of a copper trading company with $150,000,000 capital. Its business will be the handling of the metal, and will possibly overcome the present increased production and large accumulation.

U. S. Smelting eased off fractionally to 58¾. Arizona Commercial and Lake Copper were both heavy and without apparent support. Amalgamated broke over a point to 83¼, and Steel common lost a point to 84¾.

Curb trading was in specialties like First National, Chino and Nevada Utah. The first two were heavy, while the last named was a trifle firmer. Davis-Daly settled to 6½. The contest for control of this company is still in full blast.

STEEL COMMON HIGHEST EVER

By CHARLES W. STORM.

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—Steel common and Pennsylvania made new high records at the opening of trading in Wall Street to-day. The former sold at 86¼, an advance of 1¼ points and the highest price in its history. Pennsylvania rose fractionally to 147⅝. Trading in these issues was on a heavy scale.

Shortly after the beginning of the session, Reading became extremely weak because of its disappointing annual report, and declined 1½ points. This statement of earnings showed a decrease in surplus for the three companies of $334,811. This weakness had a sympathetic effect on the balance of the list, and liberal selling of Southern Pacific, Union Pacific, St. Paul and Steel common followed. This resulted in an average decline of about a point.

On the downward movement Pennsylvania was a tower of strength. There seemed to be an eager purchaser for all stocks offered. The buying was so good of other stocks at the low figures that the bears became frightened and began scrambling to get back the stocks that they had sold. This caused a rally.

Interborough-Metropolitan shares were steady as a result of semi-official announcement that the earnings of the subway and elevated lines are running about $5,000 a day ahead of those of last year.

Atchison and Steel were the strong features of the American department in London. Profit-taking developed in the copper shares.

On the New York curb market business was fairly active, with no material change in prices.

MILLIONS OF QUEER FLIES SWARM NORTH

A plague of flies swarmed north over New England to-day and scientists are wondering whence and why they came. They reached Worcester yesterday and stayed a few hours and caused great annoyance. There were millions of them, all having green bodies and white wings. In some parts of the city they were so thick they looked like snowflakes. They got into nostrils and eyes and were a veritable pest. Towards night they winged their way towards the North.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

It is a day of disillusionment in State Street. The bulls have lost a St. Paul bond issue by official notice, a Jersey Central dividend increase and a dividend on American Agricultural Chemical. They also have discovered that the Reading directors do not intend to increase the dividend on the common stock as long as there is a single hundred-share stockholder who can be scared out of his portion in the big melon that is to be cut some of these days. The bears got over the idea that a money panic was in sight.

$ $ $

Conservative bankers now take the position that the market will advance with very wide swings, and they are warning persons with sensitive nerves to keep out of it altogether. The public has refused to buy the stocks at low prices, although repeatedly invited to do so. The big people are now determined to taunt the little people with their vast stock market profits and thus tantalize them into buying.

$ $ $

The coalers are in a much stronger market condition by reason of the declaration of only the regular dividend by Jersey Central. It seems that a mistake has been made in expecting an increase of the Reading dividend, but nobody has been harmed by the mistake because the stock is now at high record prices, and any one feeling aggrieved can get out at a profit. The chief reason for abandoning hope for an 8 per cent. rate on Reading is that such a rate would be absurdly small. An examination of the accounts of the underlying properties of the Reading Company shows that it has at least $40,000,000 of cash and cash assets on hand that could be distributed to stockholders. It looks now as though the plan in Reading is to put the stock to such a level as to make it impossible for anybody not on the inside to have it and sleep at nights. It is one of the most brazen campaigns to rob minority stockholders that has ever been seen.

$ $ $

The action of the Reading insiders may be good for the public after all, for it will attract the attention of Congress and may result in a law compelling railroad corporations to make a public statement of all assets. It is just as much a fraud on the public to conceal assets as to claim an excess of assets. The New York Stock Exchange has abolished the unlisted department in obedience to the demand of an outraged public. It will be compelled to abolish concealed assets in obedience to the same demand.

$ $ $

The Reading Company owns stocks of subsidiary corporations listed at a total value of $52,757,676. Separate reports of these companies, which number sixty-two, are not published, and yet several of them are making very large earnings and have great cash surpluses in their treasuries. The Reading Iron Company is one of the most valuable of these subsidiaries. It is said to make more than a million dollars net profits every year, but is carried on the books at a valuation of about $3,000,000. It acknowledges a surplus of $14,341,531, or five times its listed value, and every dollar of this surplus belongs to the Reading Company.

$ $ $

Concealed assets are a fraud. Their existence makes it a gambling proposition to buy the stock of the great railroad or industrial companies. The insiders have managed to retain their unfair advantage for many years by denouncing as blackmailers all stockholders attempting to get redress through the courts. If the plans of President Taft do not miscarry every stockholder will be entitled to know the facts very soon. A policy of honesty would really be better for the companies because their stocks would then sell at the true value, and in the case of the Reading Company and United States Rubber that price would be very much higher than the present level.

PATTEN TO PUSH COTTON TO 15 CENTS

NEW YORK, Sept. 22—James A. Patten, who made a fortune out of his now historic wheat deal and is now buying cotton, to what extent nobody knows, says he won't sell until the staple reaches 15 cents a pound. When he started buying cotton, it was 8½ cents a pound.

Mr. Patten was in an unusually communicative mood on everything except one of the most interesting of all—to what extent he was financially involved in the remarkable happenings that have set the Cotton Exchange in a state bordering on hysteria.

"The public has known you heretofore strictly as a grain speculator," he was reminded by a reporter for the AMERICAN. "Now that you are in cotton the public would like to know how you happened to get in it."

Mr. Patten chuckled.

Will Hold to 15 Cents.

"How did I get in cotton?" he repeated. "Simplest thing in the world. I have been in cotton nearly a year. I started when the highest market price was about eight and a half. To-day it is around thirteen. That represents a tolerably good profit. I have not sold a bale. I won't sell until the staple reaches its logical price, which I am certain is above fifteen. Indeed, I should not be surprised if it went to twenty cents a pound.

"Through the correspondence of the grain commission house in Chicago, in which I am a partner, I learned early last Winter that the prospects for a normal cotton crop this year were not good. I have been buying ever since."

"How much do you hold now?"

"I should be telling tales out of school if I should answer that question," he said. "And, besides, it's nobody's business but my own. I have some, and I am holding on to it. Maybe I am buying more. But I am not selling any.

"An era of prosperity is setting in all over the world. The mills everywhere are reopening and this means that mills in all countries are looking to us for the crop. That is the reason I got in cotton, and got in early."

"But you are not undertaking to corner the market as Sully did?" was suggested.

Not Seeking to Corner Market.

"Bless you, no!" snapped Mr. Patten. "To corner any staple commodity is too big a job for any man to undertake. And right here I want to say that I did not try to corner the wheat market, in spite of all reports to the contrary."

"Do you regard the condition of the country now as prosperous?"

"Indeed, I do," answered Mr. Patten with enthusiasm. "But our prosperity has not yet reached its zenith by a great deal. I look for a period of prosperity unequalled in modern times. The chief drawback now is that there are not men enough to do the work required."

COLD KEEPS DRAPER FROM RIFLE RANGE

WAKEFIELD, Sept. 22.—Because of a heavy cold with which he is suffering and which he feared might be added to by the exposure, Governor Draper did not visit the Wakefield range on Governor's day. Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham and about twenty-five members of the Governor's staff and of the various department staffs were at the range all day, however, and, although no scores were given out at the close of the shooting, it was announced that all had qualified, both with rifles and revolvers.

PRESIDENT FAVORS HEARST PLAN FOR INTERSTATE COMMERCE COURT PROPOSED TO CONGRESS IN 1905

One of the things which has commended, and will continue to commend, President Taft to the respect of his countrymen is the candor and tranquil courage which he brings to the discussion of public questions.

All through this present tour of the country—and not always to the applause of his hearers—this characteristic has been manifested—in Boston, in Chicago and in St. Paul.

What more notable illustration of this quality than when the President at Des Moines, capital of a great Republican State and home of Hepburn, frankly tells a great audience that the Hepburn rate bill has been a failure: "that it does not furnish relief against discriminating rates as effectively as he had expected, and that its essential defeat is the delay in litigation over the edicts of the Interstate Commerce Commission."

After this premise the President took a firm stand for the creation of a new federal court to expedite the settlement of questions of interstate commerce.

Mr. Taft referred in his speech to the bill introduced into the House of Representatives by Mr. William R. Hearst on the fourth of December, 1905.

The Hearst bill provided for an interstate commerce court on precisely the model now recommended by the President.

The gist of that bill is found in this extract from sections 8 and 9:

> Section 8: That there is hereby created a court to be known as the Court of Interstate Commerce, which shall consist of three justices, two of whom shall constitute a quorum. Said court shall be a court of record with jurisdiction as hereafter defined, etc., etc., etc.
>
> Section 9. That said Court of Interstate Commerce shall have exclusive jurisdiction to review all orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission and summarily to enforce performance thereof by writs or other proper process. The said court shall also have exclusive jurisdiction in all proceedings brought by or upon the request of the Interstate Commerce Commission of section 3 of an act "To Further Regulate Commerce with Foreign Nations and Among the States." Approved Feb. 19th, 1903, etc., etc.
>
> The bill further provided that any party to a proceeding before the Interstate Commerce Commission might file a petition for review within thirty days, and an answer must be filed within twenty days, so that the court after a review might promptly render a decision.

In a speech delivered in Los Angeles on December 27, three weeks after the presentation of this bill, Mr. Hearst said:

> "Indeed, I have felt, as a Representative in Congress of the City of New York, that I could not better serve my immediate constituents than by introducing bills like my railroad rate bill, that I had hoped would benefit all the people and stimulate production and the trade of the whole country. I incorporated in that bill a povision for an interstate commerce court to render prompt and effective the decisions of the Interstate Commerce Commission.
>
> "I have no special proprietary pride in my own bill, and I do not care particularly for the credit of railway rats legislation as long as the people get the benefit, but I do hope that some bill will be passed that contains the commerce court provision.
>
> "I have been over three years before the Interstate Commerce Commission prosecuting the Coal Trust cases, and I know that any bill that does not establish a special responsible court to speedily review and enforce the findings of the Commission is an inadequate and insufficient measure, appearing well enough, but having no practical value."

And this is the language of Mr. Taft at Des Moines:

> "In one of the bills originally introduced" (the Hearst bill) "such a separate court was provided for, but the provision was defeated. A tariff court has been provided in the new tariff bill, to consist of five members, whose judgment shall be final on all questions arising under the administration of the tariff. I am strongly inclined to think that a similar court—except that an appeal ought to lie from it to the Supreme Court—will serve the purpose of expedition and the dispatch of business in respect to the orders of the commission."

The words of the President ring true and clear all the way through this notable utterance. It is evident that he fully understands the situation, and is absolutely sincere and resolute in his determination to deal with this vital matter directly and in exact accord with the assurances given to the people in the last campaign.

Mr. Roosevelt, in a message following upon the introduction of the Hearst bill of 1905, did indeed heartily commend the Interstate Commerce Court, as urged therein.

But Mr. Roosevelt, in his usual bungling of fulfillment, permitted this man, Hepburn, who had already been burned in effigy in his own State for insincerity in this rate matter, to present and pass a measure which practically obliterated all the best features of the Hearst bill.

Mr. Taft now not only effectively disposes of the Iowa Relic of Effigy, but, with exceptional liberality and candor, advocates, almost without amendment, the Interstate Commerce Court bill presented by Mr. Hearst, and proposes to press it to enactment in the interest of justice and the people.

The American sincerely congratulates President Taft upon this exhibition of courage and a genuine American spirit, and it felicitates the people upon the promise of fulfilment guaranteed by the President's earnestness in the matter.

The Hearst newspapers will continue to lend their full co-operation and support to the advocacy of this measure, which came from their own headquarters, and which, along with other public measures from the same source, has at last impressed itself upon the judgment and approval of the President and the American people.

CHAINES OSTEOPATHY EDITORIAL.
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

We read with pleasure your very sane and able editorial on osteopathy, and wish to thank you for the intelligent way in which you handled the subject.

Osteopaths all feel that they have at last found a scientific, non-empirical method of treating non-surgical diseases, and that they must prove and demonstrate that their profession will perform that which it claims for it. All we ask is fair play, no favors. Thanking you again, we remain, very truly yours,

ROOSEVELT IN AFRICA.
Editor BOSTON AMERICAN:

As an admirer of President Roosevelt, his manhood and his enthusiasm, I must say that I cannot indorse his doings in far off Africa. The killing and, as I believe, the unnecessary slaughter of valuable animals is not in accord with the best instincts of civilization. I cannot understand how any human being can continue in such an expedition without some feeling of remorse.

THE HEARST RAILROAD RATE BILL

Rejected by Republicans in Congress in 1905; Now Becomes Cornerstone of Taft Policy

President Taft's speech at Des Moines, Iowa:

"The railroad rebate bill has now been in operation some three years, and it must be admitted that it has not furnished the relief against unduly discriminatory rates with the expedition and effectiveness which were expected. The Republican platform promised additional legislation. It is proposed now by a number of gentlemen of my Cabinet, who have conferred with some members of the Interstate Commerce Commission, to facilitate these appeals from the commission by the creation of a separate interstate commerce court of five members, which shall be the only court to which petitions to set aside the orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission can be made; and it is proposed to allow a single judge to make an order staying the proceedings of the Interstate Commerce Commission by sixty days, and thereafter that no injunction shall be allowed against the order of the commission unless granted by the whole court of five members.

"In one of the bills originally introduced (by Representative Hearst) such a separate court was provided for, but the provision was defeated. A tariff court has since been provided in the new tariff bill, to consist of five members, whose judgment shall be final on all questions arising under the administration of the tariff. I am strongly inclined to think that a similar court—except that an appeal ought to lie from it to the Supreme Court—will serve the purpose of expedition and the dispatch of business in respect to the orders of the commission.

"A third amendment to the act should provide that the commission may by order suspend, modify or annul any changes in the rules or regulations which impose undue burdens on shippers. No doubt ought to be left with respect to the power of the commission on such a subject, because the rules and regulations of a railway are the means by which injustice may be done to the shipper."

Provisions of House Bill No. 469, known as the Hearst railroad rate bill, introduced in the House of Representatives at Washington, December 4, 1905:

That the Interstate Commerce Commission shall decide what rate for transportation of freight or passengers is reasonable or just; the commission shall prescribe the form, contents and arrangement of all schedules, rates, fares and charges, and it shall be the duty of the commission to make orders from time to time to secure uniformity in freight transportation and concise and easily understood provisions and regulations * * * all changes in rates, fares or charges shall be posted in all depots or stations where passengers or freight are received for at least thirty days prior to the date when such change becomes effective.

That there is hereby created a court, to be known as the "Court of Interstate Commerce," which shall consist of three justices, of whom two shall constitute a quorum. Such court shall be a court of record. The justices shall be appointed by the President, by and with the advice and consent of the Senate.

That said Court of Interstate Commerce shall have exclusive jurisdiction to review all orders of the Interstate Commerce Commission and summarily enforce performance thereof. Disobedience of any order, writ or other process of said court shall constitute contempt, punishable by a fine of $5,000 or by imprisonment of not more than one year.

Any party aggrieved by an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission may within thirty days file with the said court a petition for review * * * within twenty days thereafter a certified copy of the complaint shall be filed by the court * * * said court shall thereupon as speedily as may be review the order appealed from.

A decision of said court shall be final, and no appeal therefrom shall lie, unless, in the opinion of said court a constitutional question is involved which should be reviewed by the Supreme Court of the United States, or unless such Supreme Court, upon appearing to its satisfaction that a constitutional question is involved, issues a writ of certiorari. In the Supreme Court such case shall take precedence over all other proceedings except criminal cases.

That the Interstate Commerce Commission shall proceed expeditiously in the trial and determination of all cases brought before it, and render a decision in each case within sixty days after the cause shall have been submitted.

Steena Oleson Mixes in the Pole Controversy

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

HER name is Steena Oleson. She is short and fat and fair. She came to us from an employment agency two weeks ago, and until yesterday she acted the part of an ideal servant, of the "perfect jewel" variety.

Yesterday, when she brought in the wheat cakes and sausages, the bright morning sun seemed to take on a sombre tinge. Steena was plainly put out.

"Good morning, Steena," said my wife. "What is wrong?"

"Everyteng," said Steena. "Everyteng ban wrong. Ay vant to back in Stockholm."

"There, there, Steena," soothed my altar affinity, "let us lolly you up a little."

"Ay don't lolly me!" said Steena, and there was any amount of finality in her words. "Ay yust ban having a fight with yanitor. Ay ain't care for nigger yanitors. Ay hating dem."

"What did he do, or say?" I wanted to know.

"Vunde and plenty," replied Steena. "Ay tal yu, Maester, he ban giving me a fine insult. Yu know vat he say? He say that only man vich shud go with Maester Peary to the Pole ban a black faller. And he tal me dis faller ban named Henson or Hutson. Ay aut going to stand for dis bar kind of talking. Dar ban no nigger Swides, Ay tal you dis."

She slammed down the dishes, with no particular regard for observations, and started for the kitchen.

"One moment, Steena," said my wife, "you mustn't feel angry over a little thing like that. You mustn't let a negro janitor get on your nerves. Let him talk. Don't pay any attention to him."

"Ay yust can't help it," declared the faithful servitor. "Yes Ay come in dis morning dis black faller ban grinning in elevator, and he say to me, 'Val, blondy, Ay ban writing a new coon song about my great countryman. It ban a great honor to ya Swede,' he say to me, 'to have a colored exploring faller named with Swede name. Dis bar ban the song,' he say, and den he start to sing:

"'Rufus Rastus Johnson Henson,
Ay ban glad ya ban with Peary;
Only Ay don't his yore name,
Swedes shol make me gude and weary!'"

"Well, Steena," said my wife, "don't pay any attention to him. I engaged you to be our servant, and you have proved so far to be a very good one. I didn't hire you to have words with the janitor of the hallways. Don't notice him any more than you can help."

"Ay bet yu Ay shol notice him," declared Steena. "Ay got my big cousin Ole, longshoreman down near Atlantic avnoo. I shol have him reeging up bar and breaking dis bar janitor's yaw."

"Breaking what?"

"Breaking his yaw," replied Steena, "dis yaw, vat he ban chewing with. Dar ant any nigger shol making fun of me, and taling me dis Henson ban a colored faller. Ay know he ban a Swede, and Ay guess Ay shol yump dis bar yob. Gutebye."

"Don't go, Steena," I implored, "I will see that the janitor is discharged. I agree with you that the man who reached the Pole with Peary, if either of them ever reached the Pole, is a Swede."

The fat assistant beamed at me. "Tank yu, Maester," she chuckled. "Yu bet yu ban right. Ay shol stay."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

FEDERAL GOVERNMENT

S. H. T.—It is a mistake to suppose that the idea of federation in government originated with the framers of the United States Constitution. Long before the Philadelphia Convention met federalism existed in Switzerland, and the idea when adopted by the Swiss Cantons was already an old one. The first attempt at Federal Union of States was made in Greece, in the instance of the celebrated Achean and Aetolian Leagues (280 B. C.), formed by the Greek States to save themselves from slavery to Macedon.

MEMORY OF BEES

H. M. C.—Sir John Lubbock, in his remarkable book on bees, proves that the honeymakers have plenty of memory. He has shown that the bees of a colony recognized each other after a separation of fifteen months. The members of the same colony always recognize each other after a prolonged absence; and, although it has not yet been established, there seems to be good reason to believe that they do so principally by the sense of smell, and not by some signal or password, as has been supposed.
